OUT OF THE WOODS
By Jim Stevens

Noggin, Piggins and Treen . . .

They are not names from a story for children but each is a particle of speech that was in general use when the American industrial economy was based mainly on wood.

"Treen" in its earliest use was a plural for "tree." Later the word was applied to wooden ware generally. "Noggin," a small wood mug, was a common item of the treen trade of 150 years ago. So was the "piggins," a baby bucket that had a stave sticking up to serve as a dipping handle.

The noggin and the piggins were prime tools in family life when Abraham Lincoln was a boy and water was commonly carried by hand to house from spring, creek or well. They were also prized as measures in the sale of whisky when it retailed at a penny a snort and at 25 cents per gallon jug -- with the consumer providing his own jug.

Whisky not only came cheap but American blood ran hot in those days. Duels were fought, and these very often, with noggins or piggins for weapons. The piggins preceded the bungstarter as an instrument for enforcing peace in the common saloon, history records.

Whittling boys of Colonial times grew up into carpenters who were kings of labor all over the Colonies. Others became shipwrights. Sons of this breed came to Boston in due course, to build the Constitution of white oak from New Jersey and white pine from Maine. Around 20 years ago new masts were cut for the old flagship, then and now a floating museum, in a Columbia river sawmill. They were Douglas fir. The mainmast timber was 36"x36" and 112 feet long. The main yard timber was a 90-footer.

There still were men who had the know-how to work up and fit out such a job. At last report the Constitution remains a Navy showpiece. What is needed is a complete national museum to show off the sycamore wheels, millwheel cogs of dogwood, butternut coach panels, cypress and cedar water pipe, harrow teeth, whip handles, wood grist mills, printing presses, looms, wood and brass clocks by Rittenhouse, Terry and Seth Thomas, early woodworking machines such as the Blanchard lathe, along with the multitude of American hand tools for hewing and whittling wood into usable shapes.

Century of Progress . . . What set me to brooding on these things is a copy of the National Lumber Manufacturers association "News." I have it right here.

It says in the NLMA News that the American Society of Civil Engineers is to celebrate its 100th birthday in Chicago during the days of September 3-13. Part of it will be five sessions given to a century of progress in engineering with wood. One of the 21 lecture subjects on the program is "History of the Woodworking Industry," to be presented by Fred E. Wangaard, Professor of Forestry, Yale university. I'm writing for a copy of the lecture. Then I'll tell you more about it.

It is my hope that Professor Wangaard will see fit to advocate the establishment of a national wood engineering and woodworking historical museum in Chicago, with branches in the principal lumbering regions of the country. With the big hope goes a little one -- that the project will serve to collect and save surviving examples of early American noggins, piggins and other treen.

ROUND ONE ENDS HAPPILY

Coldwater, Mich. (U.P.)--Mrs. Minnie Green charged John Arch, 60, with assault and battery. Arch spent the week end in jail. When they appeared before the justice of peace, Mrs. Green said they had settled their troubles out of court. They had been married.

Your Health and Its Care

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

TO TEACH MORE PEOPLE HOW TO LIVE

Dear Dr. Brady:

I was so glad to find your column in yesterday's News-Dispatch and learn that you are still alive, as for several months I have had a strong feeling that you had passed on and others were using your name. . . .

That's the pernicious effect of the propaganda carried on by near-doctors, queer doctors, charlatans, trick specialists and others who wish I were out of this world and sometimes assure their gullible customers that I have been under the sod these many years. Indeed, a statement to that effect appeared in the editorial columns of a newspaper in northern Minnesota. Come, come, fellows, don't rush me. When my time comes I'll turn up my toes and whoever takes over my column will use his or her own name, not mine. Moreover, please don't put me under the sod. I prefer more sanitary disposal.

. . . I have been an ardent Brady fan for so long that I can hardly tell the year I began reading your column. The clipping inclosed is one of many I saved. . . . attended your lecture with my mother who lived to the age of 98 by your advice. . . .

Yes, I advise everybody to live at least that long, but seldom does anybody take my advice seriously until he or she suddenly realizes he or she has begun to degenerate, to die.

. . . I am 84 and still going, thanks to your fine teachings. . . . several times I have showed your column to my doctor to convince him you were right and he was wrong. The last time I did so he did not like it and gave me a prescription for . . . and on having it filled I learned it was just what you had often recommended. . . .

Dear me, I do wish you would not need the doctor like that. Most of the good doctors would like to kick me into the middle of next week just for their peace and comfort in everyday practice. But when you send me in to pitch against your doctor like that it is just too much to endure. Please let me make my own enemies.

. . . At any rate I can assure anybody who may not believe there is or was a Dr. William Brady that there is or was, for I saw him and heard him speak. . . .

Even without the use of mirrors, just with moving pictures, you might see and hear the old quack and still not be sure you saw and heard him in person, you know. And assuming you saw and heard him in person in 1938 you can hardly assure anybody he is still grinding out the old hokum.

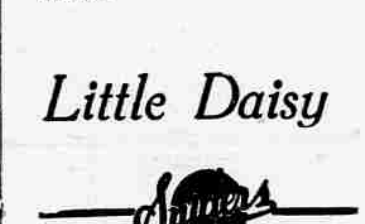

. . . hope you live many more years and continue to teach people how to live. My daughter, granddaughter and her three babies. . . .

I'm doing my best, Ma'am, by

We reported for work in the orchard yesterday and promptly resigned after falling 42 feet right on our pear shaped head.

It was our own fault, we suppose, but why didn't someone tell us it was only a sixteen foot ladder?

Dear me, I do wish you would not need the doctor like that. Most of the good doctors would like to kick me into the middle of next week just for their peace and comfort in everyday practice. But when you send me in

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Is truth serum available in pill form to the public? I'd like to know just what to buy to get the truth from an individual. (Mrs. K. M.)

Answer--No. What was called "truth serum" and "truth serum" is not serum, but a combination of morphine and scopolamine. Except maybe in a novel or magazine story you can't get the truth from any one with these drugs.

Shrewd Diagnosis
From the dismal, dim-spattered December day you hung your shingle informing the Penn Va public, in gold letters on a black board no larger than the panel of a circus wagon, that your services were available to any one with two bits in his jeans YOU HAVEN'T LEARNED A DARN THING. . . .

Answer--Probably a hundred thousand physicians and as many dentists, not to mention thousands of optometrists, are in accord with you, fellows.

But I maintain I have learned one thing: namely, that I can't say anything at all without irking one or another group of doctors, near-doctors or queer doctors. So I don't give a . . . I say what I believe the much-exploited layman ought to know, and do, I don't care which group of exploiters may be irked.

Sandwiches I eat for lunch sometimes have black stuff on them (printer's ink from the paper). Is there anything harmful in this? (D. C.)
Answer--No, but why not wash your hands before you unwrap or handle food and use wax paper to wrap sandwiches?
