EMPTY YOUR POCKETS, PLEASE

If you're an expert on human nature, please tell us why it is that people are always leaving things in their pockets.

Handkerchiefs, paper clips, packages of cigarettes... ah me, practically anything you care to name. Once, even, some type, an ad man customer of ours left in his coat pocket that he needed to set up an ad. Don't ask me why.

Another time a man comes in to pick up his suit and says: "Where's the twenty dollars?"

"Twenty dollars?" I said. "What twenty dollars?"

"The twenty dollars," he says, "that was in my pants pocket when I brought this suit in to be cleaned."

This was the first I heard of it, so I called the employees who'd handled his things. Did any of them see the twenty dollars? No, they didn't.

Well, sir, questioning elicited the fact that he was twenty dollars short, somewhere, and since he couldn't find it anywhere and it wasn't in his billfold, the only place—yes, mind you, the only place—it could have been was in the pants of the suit he'd brought in to be cleaned.

Here's our policy: If anything is ever in any of the garments brought in, it is removed before cleaning, carefully saved and given back.

We make our living cleaning clothes, not appropriating the contents of soiled garments. And oh! how a spotless clean garment is appreciated! Anyway, folks, we'd certainly appreciate it if you'd kindly empty your pockets before you BRING IT TO—
