Health Association Recommends Story About Tuberculosis

"Help me, Mother, help me," an article about tuberculosis in the August issue of Cosmopolitan magazine, has been recommended by the Jackson County Health association.
While great strides have been made in recent years toward control and cure of tuberculosis, it still remains a threat, the department said. The high rate of tuberculosis in returned prisoners of war has brought to mind the constant battle against that disease.

Written by Dorothy Virginia Smith, the article deals with the tragedy that befalls an average family unwittingly exposed to tuberculosis. In the case of the Smith family, each of their four children was a victim in varying degrees.
Prior to actual diagnosis of their children's intermittent spells of ill health, a temporary

Ike Appointee To Study Over-Lapping

Denver — (U.P.) — President Eisenhower has appointed Clarence E. Manion, former dean of the Notre Dame law school, as chairman of the Commission on Inter-governmental Relations to study the difficult over-lapping field of federal-state relations.
Manion accepted the appointment from the President at the temporary White House offices here. He told reporters, after conferring with Mr. Eisenhower, the President felt overlapping areas of taxation and authority between the federal government and the state posed a "critical" problem.

Farmers Reminded On Child Labor

Salem — The uncertainty of fall school openings due to unseasonable crop harvesting was brought a reminder of child labor regulations as they affect Oregon farmers from state Labor Commissioner W. E. Kimsey.
Kimsey said that according to federal child labor law it is illegal for any farmer to employ a child under the age of 16, other than his own children, during school hours. When schools are not in session there is no restriction on minors in agriculture except in processing machines. Work permits from the labor department are necessary for these jobs, and to work on them a minor must be at least 16.
Farmers are responsible for every under-age child working on their farms Kimsey said, pointing out that any doubt about a child's true age can be cleared by applying for a work permit from the state labor department. A farmer found to be willfully employing a minor illegally is subject to a $10,000 fine.
