

Russian Explosion of 'H-Bomb' Reported of Respectable Size

Washington—(U.P.)—Rep. Sterling Cole, (R-N. Y.), said Saturday the Russian H-bomb test of August 12 produced an explosion "of most respectable proportions."

It certainly was "more than just an atomic explosion," Cole said.

Cole is chairman of the House-Senate Atomic Energy committee. He and three other committee members in town were "informed fully" of the Soviet weapon at a secret briefing late Friday by two officials of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Reassuring Statement

Immediately after the meeting, at which the congressmen were told how U. S. intelligence detected the Russian super-bomb blast, Cole issued a statement designed to reassure the American people and their allies.

The United States, "and thus the free world, is and will continue to be in a preeminent position in the atomic arms race with Russia, Cole said.

But in a talk with the United Press later, Cole made it plain that the Soviet hydrogen weapon is not something to belittle.

Detected Quickly

The United States detected the Soviet test within a few hours after it happened. Subsequent analysis proved that it involved both fission A-bomb and thermonuclear (H-bomb) reactions.

That meant that the Russians exploded a hydrogen "device" with an A-bomb trigger.

Although the CIA told him, Cole refused to pass on any details of the size of the explosion except to tell a reporter that:

"Thermonuclear in and of itself carries the implication that it was an explosion of most respectable proportions. It certainly was more than just an 'atomic' explosion."

Majority of Orchard Men Approve Seeding Anti-Hail Program

A majority of pear growers of the Rogue River valley approve of the anti-hail program conducted by the Rogue River Valley Traffic association, it was reported Saturday.

Results of a poll taken among the valley's growers earlier this year have been released by the Jackson County Fruit Growers League. They show that of the 87 growers who answered the poll, 58 gave an unqualified "yes" to the question, "Do you approve of the cloud-seeding anti-hail program?"

There were 19 unqualified "noes."

The other 10 growers qualified their "yes" answers by suggestions about the program. Some of them approved so strongly they want it expanded; others felt there should be changes in the manner in which it is operated.

40 Per Cent Respond

Questionnaires were sent to 220 growers, and the 87 who responded equaled 40 per cent. These included 7 who have up to 5 acres; 16 who have between 5 and 10 acres; 13 who have 10 to 20 acres; 20 who have 20 to 40 acres; 18 who have 40 to 100 acres; 9 who have 100 to 300 acres; and 4 who have more than 300 acres.

Those voting yes included the owners of 3,710 acres; those voting no hold 412 acres; and those voting "yes, but..." have 974 acres, for a total of 5,105 acres.

The suggestions made by the "yes, but..." voters included the recommendation that more equipment be used and the operation expanded; that the operation be restricted in one way or another; that more supervision be placed over the operation; that group hail insurance be used as supplemental protection; and that more public information be provided on the program and its results.

Here is how the growers voted:

Acres	yes	no	yes, but...	total
0-5	3	3	1	7
5-10	10	5	1	16
10-20	9	3	1	13
20-40	12	3	3	18
40-100	7	—	2	9
100-300	3	—	1	4
300 up	3	—	1	4

Report Shows Drop In Turkey Crop From 1952 Figures

Washington—(U.P.)—The Agriculture department reported Saturday that farmers are raising 55,746,000 turkeys this year, eight per cent fewer than last year's big crop.

The department said its estimates show production of small turkeys, like the Beltsville white, down 11 per cent with large varieties off seven per cent.

Marketing Earlier

Government surveys also show that the trend toward earlier marketing of turkeys is continuing. Turkeys, once a Thanksgiving and Christmas specialty, now move to American tables all year around.

Growers plan to market 75 per cent of their 1953 production before the end of November. The eight per cent production drop is in line with farmers' intention revealed in a survey last January. Producers decided to cut back after the 1952 marketing season in which heavy production drove prices down 3.6 cents from 1951 levels.

Head Warning

Growers who curtailed their flocks also had in mind a warning from Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson who told them not to expect federal price supports unless production was held "within bounds."

Turkey production is below last year in all parts of the country except the north central states where it is up about one per cent.
