Your Health and Its Care

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Readers should address inquiries to: William Brady, 245 El Comino, Beverly Hills, Cal.

NINETEENTH CENTURY BLUNDERBUSS

In the eighteen years I served in more or less honest practice as a family doctor, before I took to quacking in the public prints, as we doctors called the newspapers before we learned how to get into them without too obvious intention to do so, I loved to peek, pry and snoop.

While putting about the house waiting for a primipara to get down to business, or washing my hands, or making sure my hair was properly brushed—I did too!—I had plenty of opportunities to inspect the family medicine cabinet. I can't tell you some of the things I found there, not in a family newspaper.

I do tell what should and what should not be kept in the medicine chest, in Little Lesson No. 14, THE MEDICINE CUPBOARD, for which booklet send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope.

One thing I found in too many such medicine cabinets was a box or vial of pills or tablets known as A B & S—a nineteenth century shotgun mixture of horse medicine (aloes or its active principle aloin), belladonna (deadly nightshade) and strychnine. There were several variations of the formula—perhaps nux vomica (the crude drug) instead of its alkaloid, strychnine; or atropine, the alkaloid, instead of crude belladonna; or dashes of mastic, ipecac, colchicin, cascara or what have you. The tablets or pills were chocolate or candy-coated, which made them attractive for children who happened to get hold of them.

Now the striking feature of nux vomica (strychnine) poisoning is restlessness, twitching movements, stiffness in the finger muscles or in the muscles of the face when the victim laughs, jerking of arm or leg and finally general convulsions. The mind remains clear and the spasms or convulsions are extremely painful. Death occurs within two or three hours after the strychnine has been taken.

When such death comes to a child, the responsibility rests heavily on the person who keeps the poison in the medicine cabinet or in any part of the house.

One who is reasonably well informed, not misinformed, will not take any such medicine in any circumstance. Ignorance of the law excuses no man. Ignorance of physiology and hygiene is no excuse either.

The blunderbuss "aid" to regulation of the bowel came into use in this fashion: The old-timers recognized that aloes was a cathartic (for horses and other animals), so they applied it in human practice. But it caused pretty severe griping, so they added an antispasmodic drug to lower the intensity of the griping—belladonna or its active principle atropine. But, darn it, the antispasmodic checked suppressed secretion throughout the alimentary tract, causing dryness of the mouth and throat, impairing digestion in stomach and intestine. So the hammer and tongs men added a good dash of nux vomica or its active principle strychnine, you know, to stimulate the secretory functions which the belladonna (atropine) checked.

If it sounds silly, it is. But a lot of people have the old nineteenth century A B & S blunderbuss to thank for the constipation habit. And this brings us to Little Lesson No. 25 THE CONSTIPATION HABIT AND COLON HYGIENE, but shucks, for 25c you can get enough of your favorite physick to last for a whole week.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

I count myself one of your k...s. Methinks I detect a little twinkling in the eye as you call these names. I believe you know the therapeutic value of a good dash of humor—life is so dull without it... Keeps us reading your column... (H. R. D.)

Answer—A complete set of Little Lessons in the Ways of Health (23 booklets), with my compliments, if you can show that I have ever called you, or identify any one I have called only for the children but for their granddad (Mrs. P. M. R.).

Answer—Thank you. Instructions for whipping up a batch when baby or grandpa has a cough are given in No. 5 Little Lesson. CALL IT CRI, for which send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Fool-Proof for Example

Must say that your fool-proof home-made cough medicine has proved wonderfully successful in our family, not only for the children but for their granddad (Mrs. P. M. R.).

Answer—Thank you. Instructions for whipping up a batch when baby or grandpa has a cough are given in No. 5 Little Lesson. CALL IT CRI, for which send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Never Mind Your Blood Pressure

At the suggestion of my physician I am requesting that you send me your pamphlet on high blood pressure. (H. K.)

Answer—Indeed I haven't any. As a health adviser I think your blood pressure is none of your business. Your physician rates a sharp rap on the knuckles—unless, perchance, well, I'll talk about this in tomorrow's column.
