

TRAINING TRAGEDY—Rescue crews drag lake at Fort Bragg, N. C., for bodies of soldiers who drowned when an engineer assault boat capsized 100 yards from shore. The men, 20 of whom drowned, were taking part in a training exercise. Officers blamed the deaths on fright and panic. It was the worst accident in the history of the post.

PARENTS WELCOME GLASSHEAT COMFORT

Parents of small children are particularly grateful for the benefits of CONTINENTAL GLASSHEAT, because it assures a constant temperature at the floor level without drafts. Either the wall panels, or the baseboard panels, radiate heat horizontally, warming the children playing on the floor first, and warming the air secondarily. It's gentle "sunshine" rays are as healthful as if the children were playing outdoors in the sunshine, a factor particularly important in the Northwest where there are so many cloudy days when the children must play indoors.

HEAT is another blessing for which parents are thankful. There is no hot floor grate, or stove for them to fall or step on. Located on the wall, there is little chance of accident, plus the fact that the surface heat of the glass panel is not great and does not require the high heat at the source as the old style convection type heaters—even furniture can be safely placed within six inches of the panels without fear of fire or scorching.

Modern parents are finding it advantageous to call at the Glasheat office, 39 South Bartlett, in order to learn more about this completely safe method of heating.—Adv.

Review of Water Use Pacts Slated By Bureau Men

Sacramento, Calif. — (U.P.) — A Bureau of Reclamation official admitted Saturday that the bureau is reviewing the terms of its controversial water use contracts.

Denies Renegotiation
The official, R. S. Calland, assistant supervising engineer of the California projects office, confirmed that the bureau's solicitor was "reviewing the whole thing." He denied, however, that the bureau wanted to renegotiate the contracts.

The bureau's move was revealed Friday at a meeting of the California Water Project Authority when it was asked by the bureau to stipulate postponement of several controversial court cases involving validation of water use contracts now in effect.

Clyde Spencer, supervising engineer of the California projects office of the bureau, was quoted at the meeting as asking for the delay but he was enroute to Boise, Ida., and could not be reached for comment.

Henry Holsinger, attorney for the California Division of Water Resources, said Spencer asked him to delay the litigation "to permit the Department of Interior to study the very important question presented by litigation and orient its future course."

Zeppo Marx is by far the richest of the Marx brothers. He quit the Marx Brothers' act some years ago and became an actors' agent. Collecting 10 per cent of other people's earnings made him wealthy. Then he invested in an engineering plant manufacturing aircraft parts and safety devices. The plant now employs about 1,000 people. Incidentally, all the Marx brothers are doing all right financially. They all live within a few blocks of each other in Beverly Hills, Calif. Harpo is the most prolific papa of the Marx clan. He has four children.

Censors
Film censors are still very active in Great Britain. A British censor has ordered cut from "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," the sequence in which Jane Russell sings "Ain't There Anyone Here to Love?" A thing like that shouldn't happen to a young woman who prides herself on being a Sunday school teacher and frequently says that when she retires from films she will devote herself to religion.

Stogie Department
One of my greatest stogie wagers triumphs was winning a smoke from Col. Matt Winn of Kentucky Derby fame on a turf subject. Now, I think I can win a stogie from the American Express Company on a travel subject. An advertisement of that organization refers to a Paris policeman as a "gendarme." That is wrong. A Paris police officer is properly referred to as an "agent de police." A gendarme is a different type of police officer.

Churchill Expected To Inform Attlee He Will Keep Reins

London — (U.P.) — Prime Minister Winston Churchill is expected to tell the leader of the opposition Labor party today that he intends to stay at the head of the British government.

Reliable informants said Churchill has invited Clement R. Attlee, Labor party leader and his predecessor as prime minister, to his official home to a luncheon conference today.

Attlee has been pressing for an authoritative statement on the possibility that Churchill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden might retire because of their recent illnesses.

Churchill is expected to tell Attlee that, for the present, he intends to keep the prime ministry and that Eden will continue in the foreign office.

But some political circles expect Churchill to turn over some of his more burdensome day-to-day duties to his aides.

Under the British parliamentary system it is customary for a prime minister to give private information to the leader of the opposition, who enjoys official status.

In Kansas, the nation's No. 1 wheat state, experience shows that preparation of the seedbed for next year's crop is worth four bushels to the acre if done in July instead of in August. The July seedbed work returns an average of 10 bushels per acre over that delayed until September.

Among the Married
Do you believe in alimony for men? An ex-husband who gets a regular alimony check is a rarity. He usually is ashamed of taking the money. Still, if a wealthy woman persuades a man to give up his business so he can entertain her on a full time basis and then later decides to leave him, it seems alimony for the husband is in order. A Texas heiress recently became involved in a love affair with a man other than her husband. Her husband divorced her and sued for alimony. He was awarded alimony of $75 a week. His wife's income is over $800 a week.

What is the oldest regularly used automobile in this country? Entered in the coming parade of antique autos by the American Automobile Association is a 55 year old car. An 1888 vintage Autocar No. 2... An airline passenger, to be in the "Young Old Timer" class should remember when passengers were weighed before embarking. Now they just weigh the baggage. One passenger airline recently had a passenger who was seven feet and weighed 350.

Revealing Past
Should a woman, about to marry, reveal her past to her prospective husband? This question has again come up for discussion. Personally, I think that is an outstanding spot to pursue the policy of silence being golden. Once in a London coffee shop, the great wit, Douglas Jerrold, and some men were discussing the marriage of a celebrated actress of the period. "I understand she told her husband about every previous love affair she had," said one man. "What a woman!" said another. "What a memory!" observed Jerrold.

Hot Dogs
Are you a hot dog enthusiast? I like hot dogs but without mustard. Frank Atkinson, the world famous hot dog expert, says, "The perfect hot dog must be cooked slowly for ten minutes on a charcoal burner with three heats. It must not be handled, because cooking does not sterilize the average hot dog. It must not be over two days old."

Cigars
The advantage of buying cigars by the box is increasing. I bought a box of fifty cigars, retailing separately at 25 cents each, for $11.30. Price previously was $12.25. Cigars, bought by the box, are generally in better condition than those exposed for sale and sold separately.

Asking
Queries from clients: Q. With characteristic Brooklyn modesty you often say you don't claim to know everything "only nearly everything." All right, smart lad, tell us after the tapping of one end of a cigarette, which end is put in the mouth before lighting. A. The end that is tapped. Incidentally, no benefit is derived from tapping the end of a cigarette. It is just an affectation.

Horses & Women
Number of shops specializing in clothes, shoes, etc., for petite females is increasing. These places should have style advisers for the cute, little trick females. Not one petite woman in ten knows how to dress to match her height. They wear things intended for the statuette type. As for example, take a small woman wearing a large hat. She looks like a toadstool.
