Barber Ends 62 Years of Misery

...Rochester, N.Y. — (U.P.) — For 62 years, Mort Havens has clipped his fellow man. He's a barber and here is what he thinks of it.

"It's the most miserable business in the world, barbering. You stand up all day if you want to make any money, and you can't even get loose to grab a sandwich."

Havens, son of a barber, began cropping craniums when he was 13 and is believed to have cut more than 220,000 heads of hair. He made his remarks on the eve of his retirement.

Mort's first customer was a local saloonkeeper who asked for the then 10-cent shave. Non-Talker

"He told me, 'don't be nervous kid,' and I was doing all right until I got down around the chin," Haven recalled. "He had bristles on him like a broom, but I got them all off all right."

Havens credits his success as a barber to the ability to keep quiet. "I never believed in this ear-bending barbering," he said. "If a guy wanted to talk, I talked. But I never opened up until I got my cue. Some just want their hair cut."

Although Havens is putting the clippers and comb away for fishing, loafing and baseball duty, he said he'll probably see the top of a few more heads, at least one being that of a fellow barber whose hair he has been cutting for 16 years.

WHAT IS LAVENDER?

First it was Iron and Ammonium Citrate (USP) in thin transparent, garnet red scales, that the druggists could or would no longer sell to my readers who wanted to mix their own chalybeate (iron blood medicine).

Next readers began to report that their druggists would or could no longer sell 'em citrate of soda to whip up a batch of fool proof cough medicine, following the recipe and directions in Little Lesson No. 5, Call It CRI (25 cents and s.a.e.).

And now, as recorded in the talk here August 24, they are after dead old boric acid, charging that it is poisonous and I don't know what all.

Frankly I had harbored a sneaking suspicion that the motive behind these efforts to take away our cheap home medicines and compel us to buy expensive nostrums was the more popular with pretty package dealers because they thought it might hamper my teaching of domestic medical economy.

But now that they're after boric acid I'm not so sure of that. I haven't made people buy more than ten or fifteen tons of boric acid in the past decade. I'm sure. Not more than a million readers, surely, have in that time followed my instructions to put two or three drops of a solution of 10 grains of boric acid in one fluid ounce of pure grain alcohol in the ear each night and morning, for chronic running ear, using a blunt dropper and always warming the solution to a comfortable degree by standing the vial in hot water for a while before using.

You know, I don't mind so much having boric acid taken away from us. After all, as an "antiseptic" boric acid is not much.

Now I'm getting a great many complaints from young people who elicit the no-such-thing reaction when they ask for one of the five ingredients of the lotion I recommend for "enlarged pores," "blackheads" or excessively oily skin, in the pamphlet on Acne available on written request (no clipping, please) if you provide stamped, self-addressed envelope. The one ingredient at which the druggist boggles is one fluid ounce of compound tincture of lavender.
