Seven Churches Represented At Methodist Meeting Here

Nearly 100 persons attended a sub-district meeting of Woman's Society of Christian Service, held last Thursday at the First Methodist church in Medford. Members from Medford, Ashland, Gold Hill, Grants Pass, Wilderville and Talent attended, as well as a number of visitors from other churches in Medford.

Theme for the day was "Christian Discipleship Around the World." Opening worship for the morning session was led by Mrs. Robert Lytle, Ashland.

Mrs. Frank Alexander, secretary of missionary education and service from Eugene, introduced study books for the year and gave suggestions for the formation of study classes. She reviewed highlights of the study course "Life and Task of the Church Around the World."

The theme of the WSCS for the current year is "A Sower Went Forth." Mrs. E. E. Cone, vice president of the Eugene district, reviewed the program for the year, based on this program booklet. Women from Gold Hill presented a model program suggested in the booklet, opening with devotions and followed by a panel on Spanish speaking neighbors.

Mrs. Frank Brown, Grants Pass, spoke on the youth emphasis program to be taken up by the conference churches this year. She made the comparison "youth today are our diamonds in the rough," and pointed out ways the WSCS can help in this emphasis program, particularly by urging youth to become interested in work of the church and professions offered through Christian channels.

Mrs. Cone reviewed the study course of "Jeremiah." She told how he spent 40 years in public life and died without seeing his dreams fulfilled. His was one of the great prophetic voices that has influenced the course of religious history in a definite and positive manner, she said.

Luncheon was served at noon by members of the local society. The Rev. Meredith Groves, former pastor of the Medford church, and now district superintendent, was present and spoke briefly on the youth emphasis program stressed earlier by Mrs. Brown.

During the afternoon program, Mrs. W. C. Stauffer, secretary of Christian social relations, Eugene, reviewed the study book "Alcohol and Christian Responsibility." She said that "alcohol is bidding high for the 20 million unchurched youth in America." She suggested that when the study is presented in the individual churches, that it be attacked from the standpoint of information rather than unbiased disapproval.

"Spanish Speaking Americans in the United States" was reviewed by Mrs. J. N. Bestul, Grants Pass, president of the Eugene district. She also introduced Mrs. John Mills of Ashland, sub-district president; Mrs. Jessie Minear, president of the Medford women's society; Mrs. Harry Clark, president from Grants Pass, and Mrs. Smith, president from Gold Hill.

One of the highlights of the day was a book review by Mrs. Earl Rogers, Medford. She was introduced by Mrs. H. P. Bosworth Jr., president of the United Council of Church Women. Mrs. Rogers reviewed Dr. Frank Laubach's late book "Wake Up or Blow Up." He states that any world war can end in destruction and we can prevent war by preventing the spread of communism. Four-fifths of the world today is tempted to become communist because of hunger, the author believes. This missionary and teacher will speak in the senior high school auditorium here October 7.

Mrs. W. C. Stauffer closed the program for the day. Mrs. Lyle Schoppert of Medford sang, accompanied by Mrs. Al Minshall. A recording of "I Walked Today Where Jesus Walked," ended the meeting.

Rome, N.Y.—(U.P.)—If a four-leaf clover is a symbol of good luck, an eight-leaf clover must be twice as lucky. That's the opinion of Mrs. Bernard Seymour, of nearby Stanwix. She found the large, perfect eight-leafed clover in her front yard.

Women's Work

By Elizabeth Toomey U.P. Staff Correspondent

New York (U.P.)—Two words loom large in news of clothes girls will wear this fall. The words are "washable" and "coordinated."

Even the three-year-olds are included in washable wool outfits and coordinated ensembles.

A man named Frank Redman gets a great deal of the credit for the washable part. A process he originally developed for the army is used widely in wool jersey blouses. Called Redmanized, the secret process reduces shrinkage of wool jersey to less than three per cent.

Goal of 100% "Last year about 25 per cent of our wool jerseys were washable, but this year more than half are processed," said an official of the Allen Knitting Mills. "By next year it may well be 100 per cent."

His company uses Redman's process. Other processes will be used by some other fabric companies in the race to make everything washable.

One coordinated outfit for three to six-year-olds that uses the new washable jersey has a red and green plaid Scottish skirt with a washable red jersey blouse and a triangular stole of fringed plaid.

Another small-size style preview is a combination of washable gold wool jersey and brown and gold tweed wool. The jersey blouse has gold wool yarn fringe trim that's repeated on the skirt pocket.

The kids can copy co-ed styles again in corduroy and washable jersey combinations. One four-piece outfit for seven-year-olds has a red wool jersey blouse trimmed with plaid corduroy, a corduroy weskit, skirt and jumper.

Other Outfits

The sophisticated turtle-neck jerseys are made in tiny sizes. Angora wool is the newest trimming for dark wool jerseys, but some of the party blouses are oyster white with tiny cutout flowers of felt on the collars. Because they're washable, these woollens can be summery shaded as organdies.

Teen-agers will be able to buy carefully-matched wool skirts and washable wool jersey blouses. One company plans to feature a long-sleeved blouse and slim skirt in camel color. A black jersey blouse with pink stitching is matched with a pink-stitched flannel skirt.

The best thing about these upcoming high fashions for small fry and teen-agers is the price. Teen-agers can get a coordinated outfit for under $20 that includes a nubby tweed skirt and a washable wool jersey blouse. Little girls buy their high fashion for half the price.

In addition to its main library in the Civic Center, San Francisco maintains 12 large and nine small branch public libraries.

As We Live

By ELIZABETH MURLOCK, PH.D.

THIS GIRL SHOULD FINISH COLLEGE BEFORE MARRYING Most American families today want to give their sons as much education as they can afford. But when it comes to their daughters, many men feel as this father does:

(Q) "My daughter has had three years of college. I wanted her to be prepared to teach or do something to support herself. She has been going with a young man the past year and has just told us she wants to marry him. My wife wants her to finish her college education first but I feel that a wedding will cost us a lot of money and it is foolish to send her back to college as she will not need her degree if she is going to be married. The man she plans to marry says he doesn't want his wife to work. What is your opinion on this subject?"

(A) I agree with your wife that your daughter should complete her education before she marries. She has already had three years of college. She should not leave undone what she has started to do. Some day she may be very glad that she has a college degree.

Even though the young man does not want her to work after they are married, there is no guarantee that she will not have to. If he were taken ill or should die, she might find herself in need of a job.

With a college degree she would be in a far better position to get one that would pay her well than if she had only an unfinished college course to her credit. Then if she tried to finish her education after being out of college for many years, she might find it impossible to get back into the swing of studying again.

Another argument in favor of her finishing her education is that it will be an asset to her in her community life to be a college graduate. She will be able to take an active part in many more community organizations as a college graduate. It means only one more year. Make the financial sacrifices needed to let her finish the job she has started, even if it will mean a smaller and less pretentious wedding for her.

Steelworkers To Demand Guaranteed Wage Clause

Chicago — (U.P.) — The CIO United Steelworkers union will demand that a guaranteed annual wage clause be included in its 1954 work contracts, a union official said today.

Secretary-Treasurer I. W. Abel said that increasing layoffs because of production cutbacks in the steel industry had made the guaranteed wage clause a major demand.

Abel said the steelworker's National Wage Policy committee will meet in New York Oct. 21.

Gas buses, street cars and trackless trolleys in America traveled more than 3,000,000,000 miles in 1952 which is about equal to 18 round trips from the earth to the sun.
