

Around Hollywood

Hollywood — (U.P.) — Terry Moore, one of the last of the colorful sweater girls, switched today to the Dior "flatter look" and announced from on she's in the Grace Kelly school.

This current trend toward ladyism is another blow at the bosom cycle of Hollywood, the passing of which is regrettable to some fans and a relief to others.

Zsa Zsa Gabor is trying to forget her headlines and be a "serious actress." Shelley Winters vows she will not deliver snappy lines to the press any more but will discuss only drama techniques.

Now Miss Moore has forsaken plunging necklines for high-necked dresses, a less curvy figure and a more serious manner.

A New Trend

"I think a new trend has come," declared Terry from a nearly upside down position as she had her hair shampooed at 20th Century-Fox studio.

"You go as far as you can one way, and then the pendulum swings back.

"Now take Grace Kelly—what is it she has? She's a lady. The other trend went as far as it could go. When girls get completely undressed the only thing to do is start dressing them again."

Strenuous dancing lessons have whittled Terry's bosom to 34½ and given her a sleeker figure. She even massaged the curves off her cheeks. Recently she astounded movietown partygoers by wearing an evening dress buttoned to her chin. Today she wore a high-necked simple black dress that was more Park Avenue than Hollywood.

For her next picture, "Daddy Longlegs," she's donning two sweaters instead of one to hide her curves.

No More 'Wows'

"I wear a suit, too, that doesn't flatten the bust, but just doesn't point it up," said Terry. "You see me and think, what a smart-looking girl, instead of—Wow!"

"Men actually prefer smartness to those low-cut necklines. Smartness is far from alluring."

One reason for the new Terry Moore may be that she hasn't made a picture in a year. Her studio didn't have any roles suited for her.

In her year off the screen, Terry made her big-time stage debut in eastern summer stock, appeared on TV, did a Las Vegas nightclub act and took dancing, voice and diction lessons. This strenuous work paid off with a dancing role opposite Fred Astaire in "Daddy Longlegs."

"I'm just more serious about everything now," said the pert actress. "People respect you more. There's no substitute for talent or good taste."

Missionary From Formosa To Speak

Dick Hills, a missionary who recently returned from Formosa, will speak at the First Presbyterian church, Thursday at 7:30 p.m. He has been in Communist China and knows first-hand what the Communists are like.

His many years in China give him a keen understanding of the Chinese mind. He was formerly with the China Inland mission. When conditions made it impossible for him to return to Communist-held China he went to Formosa. He will tell of his experiences there. Hills was invited by Madame Chiang Kai-shek to go to Formosa to start the Orient Crusades in that vital and strategic island. He will tell of the hopes of the Chinese to retake the mainland and what the chances are that this will happen soon.

All Christians are invited to the open meeting.

There are more than 450,000 American Indians, on reservations or registered with the government, in the U. S. today. Most numerous are the Navajos of Arizona, New Mexico and Utah, with the Hopis, Apaches and Blackfeet next in order.

Portland — (U.P.) — Oral Pons, 75, Portland, was killed Sunday when he was struck by an automobile at a street intersection.

Texas, the largest state in the nation, embraces more than one-twelfth of the total area of the continental United States.

Buttons and Bows

All three units of the 4-H Sewing club "Buttons and Bows" met at the Griffin Creek school cafeteria on Nov. 13. Sixteen girls were present with four leaders. The first-year girls finished their needlecases, scarves and peasant aprons are the projects the older girls are working on.

On November 20, a business meeting is planned at the school at 2 p.m. Mothers of the girls are urged to attend.
