As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

Young Woman's Dislikes Keep Her In Loneliness

No one can go through life without doing some things he does not like to do. The young woman who wrote the following letter is allowing her dislikes to stand in the way of her happiness. She states:

(Q) "I am 23 years old, live at home with my parents, and have a rather lonely life. I go to business but, in the evenings and over the week-ends, I just sit at home, watch television, or go to the movies with my family. I rarely have dates, as all the men seem to want to dance or play cards. I never learned to dance, as I do not care for it, and I don't enjoy playing cards. My friends tell me I am foolish not to learn to do these things, but it seems like such a waste of time to

What is your advice?"

(A) My advice is to do as your friends suggest. Forget your dislikes and learn to do the things other people of your age enjoy during their free time. You should have learned these "social skills" long ago, while you were still a school girl.

However, it is not too late now. Most YWCA's have classes in dancing and card playing for business women. Join these classes. Learn how to dance and play cards. Get as much practice as you can so that you will not feel self-conscious when asked to go out with a young man.

Since most of your friends think you cannot dance or play cards, they do not invite you to their parties. When you feel that you have mastered these skills well enough to join your friends, have a small evening card party. Invite some of the young men and women whom you know in your work or from your school days.

Go to the dances given by various church and community groups. There you will have an opportunity to meet young men and to dance with them. It should not take long to begin having dates—once you get into the swing of doing the things other young people do. Then your lonely evenings before the television set will be a thing of the past.

Dozen Frogs Show Up At Opening of School

Plattekill, N. Y. (U.P.)—Usually it's a little lamb that follows Mary to school, or maybe a dog that can't bear to be parted from its young master. But here the version was different.

When Plattekill School opened for 26 fifth graders, a dozen frogs ganged up at a cellar window, ostensibly hoping to get a drink at the font of knowledge. The youngsters spent the first day of school chasing the frogs.

GENERAL RELIEVED—Gen. Naguib leaves Presidential Palace in Cairo after being "relieved" of his office by Revolutionary Council. Police are now rounding up members of outlawed Moslem Brotherhood throughout Egypt. Members of the brotherhood who have already been arrested revealed they were acting in agreement with Naguib in their recent attempt on Prime Minister Nasser's life.
