How To Pronounce Pennsylvania Dutch

Madison, Wis.—(U.P.)—Two professors have prepared a pronunciation guide for "Pennsylvania Dutch."

The book, entitled "A Linguistic Atlas of Pennsylvania German," was written by Lester W. Seifert, chairman of the University of Wisconsin extension division's German department, and Carroll E. Reed of the University of Washington.

It was published by the Deutscher Sprachatlas at Marburg, Germany.

The book consists of 90 maps showing the geographic spread of certain features of pronunciation in Pennsylvania German, or Pennsylvania Dutch as it is commonly known. In addition, there are maps showing the regional distribution of eight similar traits in southwestern Germany, the area from which most of the colonial American settlers from Germany migrated.

HELP YOURSELF

Corinth, Miss.—(U.P.)—A roadside watermelon dealer near here practiced what they preach in church about trusting your neighbor. A sign on his porch piled high with watermelons one Sunday read: "Gone to church. Melons are marked for price on each one. Take the one you want and leave money inside house."

A Nichol's Worth of . . . Comment On This and That

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Feature Writer

Chanute AFB, Ill.—(U.P.)—My old friend Fred Miller admits, as the GI's like to say, that he

Harman Nichols

"never had it so good."

Fred is an Air Force master sergeant stationed here and a sort of human recruiting poster for a service career.

He and his lovely wife, Katherine, a brunette, are buying their own home. They get a carrots and steak allotment. They get something from the government for quarters, which more than pays for their payments on the cottage. And in about six years my pal Fred can retire on a lifetime pension and have enough in the bank to set himself up in business.

Chauffeur for General

The master sergeant is a chauffeur for Maj. Gen. B. E. (Hungry) Gates. Our lad has been up in an aircraft only a couple of times since he has been in service.

"I'm a driver all right," he told me, "but I do my driving on the concrete. I wouldn't know a prop from a tail piece, except by sight."

Fred Miller has had a number of chances to go to Officer Candidate School and qualify for a commission. But he turned them all down because he's plenty satisfied with his present deal.

Look what he has.

Has It Good

When Fred and Katherine bought their house right off the base they paid only $1500 down. As of now, their rent and utilities cost only $65 a month. And from the government, according to his rank, they take in $77.10 a month for "quarters" allowance.

The sergeant from Renova, Pa., also gets a monthly allowance from the Air Force for rations, that's military for groceries, plus his salary.

About the only entertainment the Millers need can be found on the base. If they want to storm up a dance on Saturday night, they go over to the Non-commissioned Officers Club, which is one of the finest anywhere.

DELAYED REACTION

Bristol, Conn.—(U.P.)—Three days after surviving a hurricane, a big tree fell during a minor rainstorm.

On The Side

By E. V. Durling

(Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Oh, what a beautiful morning it was in Manhattan. Plenty of zip in the air. Great day for walking. I worked out two miles around the Central Park reservoir and did it four-fifths of a second under the track record. And I was just breezing. As usual, I am the short priced favorite for the Around the Reservoir Handicap. There is a sleeper this year some of the smart money boys think has a chance. That is J. Fred Coots, the song writer, trained by Clem McCarthy. J. Fred is a former Brooklynite. Comes from my old neighborhood in fact. He is a three-time winner of the Brooklyn Bridge Pedestrian's Handicap. He is a heel and toe walker. I anticipate no trouble from him. He is more for the dashes. Not a good router.

Horses & Women

Does your wife wear one of those pancake hats flat on her head? Or any type hat flat on her head? This will make her look slightly morose and arouse a suspicion that she may be suffering from arrested development. However, sir, from your standpoint it may be better than if she wore her chapeau tipped at a rakish angle. I note it said that when a woman wears her hat on the side of her head it "increases her male appeal and makes her look intriguing and slightly flirtatious." Now you don't want your wife wandering around looking intriguing and flirtatious, do you? She might get into trouble. Let her keep wearing her hat flat on her head, even if it does make her look like a flathead.

Passing By

Willie Hoppe, Veteran billiard expert. First time I met Willie he said, "I never read newspapers." Being a hard working young reporter at the time, this set me back on my heels. George Walsh, then a top film star, who was standing nearby, remarked: "Pay no attention to him, Ed. He's my brother-in-law and has never seen me in a moving picture. He doesn't read newspapers or go to the movies. That's for the protection of his eyesight. To maintain a steady hand he doesn't smoke, drink alcoholic liquors or coffee."

Asking

Queries from clients—Q. Who wrote the song titled "My Daddy Wouldn't Buy Me a Bow-wow?" A. Couldn't say, sir. It is an old British music hall song. Believe it was introduced by Marie Lloyd. It was popular in England and in this country over fifty years before the ditty titled "How Much Is That Doggie in the Window?" was written. Songs about dogs usually succeed. First hit of that type was "Old Dog Tray" by Stephen Foster. Then came "Where Has My Little Dog Gone?" written by Septimus Winner. If you want to write a hit song why not try one about a dog?

Get It Right

Note a reference to Somerset Maugham's play "Rain." Maugham wrote the short story titled "Sadie Thompson" on which the play "Rain" was based. The play was written by John Colton and Clemence Dane. The playwrights had considerable difficulty in getting Maugham's permission to dramatize his short story dealing with Sadie Thompson. He couldn't see a play in it. And was much surprised when it developed into such a terrific hit.

Cats

Are you familiar with the old song titled "The Cat Came Back?" All right, prove it. Sing it for your wife. Do cats always come back to their old homes? Does a cat love his home more than his master or mistress? I heard of a cat who, when she saw her folks were moving, went into hiding. Didn't come out until the moving van left. The cat's owner then came back and took the cat to the new home. The next day the cat went back to the old home. It's a fact.

NOBODY WANTS IT

Milford, Conn.—(U.P.)—Roland Morse asked the board of fire commissioners to demote him from superintendent to firefighter. Morse said the difference in weekly pay for the promotion amounted to 30 cents. Morse was named superintendent to replace Wilfred Dugay, who was granted his demotion for the same reason.

Nowhere but in the Great Northwest ... the beer with the Velvet Tang

One glass will show you why Heidelberg sales have more than tripled in seven short years!

Nowhere else on earth can you find a combination of scenery, climate and bountiful nature to equal that of the Great Northwest.

Nowhere else, for that matter, can you find a combination equal to that offered by the Northwest's own great beer... Heidelberg! It's a combination of velvety smoothness and zestful tang—producing a brew that's smooth and easy going down, yet so thorough in quenching thirst... and with a flavor so distinctive, that it simply can't be copied.

Folks call this wonderful combination "The Velvet Tang"—and it's exclusive with Heidelberg. It's so popular that sales of Heidelberg have more than tripled in seven short years. We ask you to try just one glass of Heidelberg... see if you don't find it the finest beer you ever tasted!
