Gen. Taylor Takes Far East Command Of Armed Forces

Retains Leadership Of 8th Army Troops

Camp Zama, Japan—(U.P.)—Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, who led the 8th army in the final stages of the Korean war, took over Saturday as commander of United States army forces in the Far East.

Taylor assumed command of all American ground troops on guard against Communist aggression in Korea, Japan and Okinawa in a five-minute ceremony in this former Japanese imperial army training camp. Succeeds Gen. Hull.

The command had been held by Gen. John E. Hull, who will continue as the United Nations military commander and commander of all American army, navy and air units in northeast Asia. Hull was unable to attend the ceremonies because of "unforeseen circumstances." A spokesman said his helicopter was grounded at Tokyo by rain and fog.

Taylor, who will retain command of the 8th army, moved his headquarters from Seoul to Camp Zama, 15 miles south of Tokyo, and assumed the formal title of commander, army forces Far East (AFEF).

A drizzling rain forced the change of command ceremonies indoors and cancelled a 600-man parade.

Huge Redeployment
Taylor's appointment followed a huge redeployment of American ground and air strength in the Far East designed to give the U. S. a more mobile striking force against possible Communist aggression.

Six of the eight American divisions which fought in Korea have been moved to Japan, Hawaii and the United States, and air force combat units have been shifted from vulnerable Korean fields to bases in Japan and the Philippines.

MORSE ATTACKS CASE'S STAND

Washington — (U.P.) — Sen. Wayne Morse (Ind.-Ore.) Saturday accused Sen. Francis Case (R-S.D.), who switched his position on part of the McCarthy censure report, of "alibing . . . without an iota of justification."

Case retorted that Morse seems unwilling to consider "new evidence."

Morse blasted Case, a member of the special subcommittee which unanimously recommended censuring Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, for withdrawing his support from the charge that McCarthy abused Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker.

"Without justification," Morse said in an interview. "Sen. Case's speech was an interesting rationalization of the position he has taken—but without an iota of justification," Morse said in an interview.

"The Watkins committee report recommends the censure of McCarthy because of the bulldozing, verbal bludgeoning which he inflicted upon the person of a great American General," said Morse.

"Case's alibiing his own failure to stand by his own signature, signed to the Watkins report, left the Senate cold and, I'm satisfied will be as unacceptable to the people of the nation as a whole," said Morse.

Debating Delayed
Debate on the McCarthy censure resolution has been called off until Nov. 29. McCarthy is in the Naval Medical center at Bethesda, Md., for treatment of an injured elbow.

Meanwhile, Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) said that the Senate has the obligation to settle the McCarthy censure issue finally. He noted that McCarthy also desired a final vote on the issue.

Viet Nam To Allow Catholics To Leave
Saigon, Indochina—(U.P.)—The International Armistice Commission for Indochina said Saturday that the Communist Viet Minh have announced they will allow evacuation of all Catholics who wish to leave north Viet Nam.

However, reports from Haiphong, French-held port at the mouth of the Red river delta said the Communists are holding back many of the Catholic refugees.

The reports from the seaport on Tonkin bay said that the Reds in the Minh Binh area of the Red river delta had forbidden refugees to go to Phatdiem where a control commission team is evacuating Catholics at the rate of about 600 a day.

Top Officials Take Part in Atom War Tests in Capital

President, Cabinet Check Communications

Washington — (U.P.) — President Eisenhower, sitting at a desk in the underground White House bomb shelter, Saturday flashed "orders" to top administration officials who had "fled" the capital to secret emergency headquarters in an atomic war preparedness exercise.

The exercise began during the night when some 2,000 key federal employees, including cabinet members and agency heads, slipped quietly out of Washington to about 30 widely-dispersed sites where complete emergency headquarters have been set up.

Communication Net
The secret headquarters, some of them as far as 300 miles from the capital, have been linked in a complex system of radio and telephone communications to enable the government to continue functioning without interruption in the event that Washington is reduced to radioactive rubble by an A-bomb or H-bomb raid.

Testing this communications network was the principal feature of Saturday's exercise. A simulated atomic attack was not involved. Mr. Eisenhower's participation began about 10:30 a.m. EST, when he left his White House office and went to the bomb shelter deep underground. He was accompanied by his naval aide, Cmdr. Edward L. Beach, press secretary James C. Hagerty, and Hagerty's assistant, Murray Snyder.

Key Issues Orders
The President was promptly connected with "high point," the code name for the headquarters of defense mobilizer Arthur S. Flemming. The actual "orders" which he gave to Flemming, Hagerty related, were to the effect that the President wanted all participants to enter into the spirit of the exercise "so that they could become fully familiar with the operation should we ever be required, in any emergency, to use it."

Florence Youth Drowns On Duck Hunting Trip
Florence, (U.P.)—Keith Radkey, 19, Florence, Ore., drowned Saturday in Washink lake near here while duck hunting.

Radkey went hunting early Saturday morning, apparently intending to quit in time to go to work as usual. An alarm was broadcast by his employer when Radkey did not report to his job.

The youth's car was found parked near the lake, and his body was recovered several hours later.

Field Makes First Public Statement
Zurich, Switzerland — (U.P.)—American architect Hermann Finsterlin in his first statement since he returned from five years of unjustified imprisonment in Communist Poland said Saturday he plans to remain in Switzerland and rest.

The 44-year-old Ohioan flew from behind the Iron Curtain and immediately went into hiding with his wife, Kate. Last night he telephoned his mother-in-law Mrs. Oliver Thornycroft in London with a message for the press.

"We were happily re-united yesterday in Switzerland. This moment was so overwhelming for us both that we were unable to meet the press, and we ask them to understand this."

"Now it is essential for us both to have a complete rest, and we shall therefore remain quietly in Switzerland for the present."

Milk Marketing Groups Vote To Support Producers Committee
Bureau Federation's state convention in Medford.

Unanimously supporting the decision of the meeting were producers from Jackson, Josephine, Washington, Deschutes, Yamhill, Klamath, Lake, Douglas, Coos and Lane counties. They represented in all an estimated 1,200 to 1,500 dairymen.

Alternative proposals considered early in the meeting included the possibility of obtaining a federal milk marketing order for the state, and a more limited type of organization, excluding Portland.

At first the producers were talking in terms of a temporary organization, to work for stability in prices only until the legislature met to consider some sort of new legislation controlling milk production. But as the evening progressed, the tenor of the meeting indicated that it should be a permanent, tightly-knit and widespread organization, perhaps also taking in southwestern Washington producers who sell milk in the Portland area.

Ray Hobson, Klamath Falls, also a member of the Tri-County group, presided at the meeting, which was swelled in attendance by the fact that today was the last day of the Oregon Farm

Molotov Offers to Postpone Sessions

Moscow — (U.P.) — Russia offered Saturday to postpone its proposed Nov. 29 European Security conference if the West will put off ratification of the Paris German rearmament agreements.

Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov proposed the deal on the agreements to free and rearm West Germany.

He warned that the "danger of war" would be increased if the Paris agreement were ratified and Germany drawn into "militaristic groupings of the Western States."

Such a situation would mean "peaceful European countries will be forced to consider new measures to ensure their security," the Foreign Minister said in a statement read to Western correspondents by Foreign Ministry Press Chief Leonid Ilyichev.

Molotov said it appeared the Western Powers planned to turn down the Soviet invitations to a European Security Conference. He accused the Western Nations' parliaments of attempting to block the proposed talks.

Places Responsibility
The Foreign Minister warned that the responsibility for speeding the arms race and increasing military spending would "lie on those who today reject organizing of collective security in Europe."

"As far as the Soviet Union is concerned," Molotov's statement said, "it considers it necessary to warn that the Paris agreements will prepare a new war in Europe."

The statement was read by Ilyichev at a press conference. Molotov was not present. His statement consisted of answers by Molotov to questions by an unidentified correspondent for the Soviet Communist party newspaper pravda at a press conference not attended by Western correspondents.

Two Nations Spurn Last Minute Effort By Soviet Leaders

Agreement Reached On Aid to Indochina

Washington — (U.P.) — The United States and France Saturday firmly slammed the door on any "peace" negotiations with Russia until after the Paris agreements on West German rearmament are ratified.

The two nations spurned a new conditional bid from Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov for a European Security conference.

French Premier Pierre Mendes-France and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles asserted in a joint communique that East-West talks must wait until the Paris agreements are ratified and the West can negotiate from strength. They brushed aside Russia's last-minute maneuver to prevent ratification of the Paris agreements.

They jointly urged "all countries concerned" to ratify the agreements as quickly as possible to "strengthen the unity of the Western world."

The communique, issued at the conclusion of Mendes-France's three-day visit here, also announced U. S. - French agreement on joint action to help the three associated states of Indochina "maintain their freedom and independence."

Express Deep Concern
While the 300-word communique gave no details, diplomats who attended the conference said the Indochina situation occupied a major place in the talks. Leaders of both nations expressed deep concern about intelligence reports that the Communists have sent three divisions into Northern Viet Nam since the Geneva Armistice was signed.

The informants said the conference felt that the reports were not yet conclusive enough to charge the Reds formally with violating the truce, and that both countries agreed to step up their efforts to collect precise information on the situation.

They also agreed to continue "high level" consultations on Indochina, probably between the French Ambassador here and an assistant Secretary of State.

Question Not Decided
The question of American officers training native defense forces in Indochina was not decided, informants said.

Gen. J. Lawton Collins is in Saigon on assignment by President Eisenhower. He has said the United States soon may assume "principal responsibility" for training native troops. But officials said the problem requires further recommendations from Collins and French High Commissioner Gen. Paul Ely.

Officials said any agreement reached between the two would be acceptable to the United States.

Dulles was reported "very pleased" with the outcome of the talks and Mendes-France, who left by train for New York Saturday afternoon, told reporters he was "satisfied."

Farm Bureau Names Two New Officials
Harris Higgins, Parkdale, was elected first vice-president of the Oregon Farm Bureau Federation at the conclusion of the 23rd annual convention here Friday afternoon. He succeeds Fred Rueck, Bonanza.

Barry Brownell, Oregon City, was reelected second vice-president. The OFBF president, Ben Robinson, Imbler, has another year of his term to serve.

Directors for five regions were elected, including Lester Van Bloklund, Imbler, for Union-Wallawalla-Baker counties; Lloyd Haukias, Bonanza, for Klamath-Lake counties; Waldo Arens, Hood River, for Wasco-Hood River counties; Art Johnson, Astoria, for Clatsop-Tillamook-Columbia counties, and Gerald Deterin, Harrisburg, Linn - Lane-Benton counties.

Directors in the other regions have another year to serve. Before the 300 or so delegates concluded the business session Friday, the finished action on a large number of resolutions. A resume of some of the most important appears on Page 5.

Portland — (U.P.)—Some 3,250,000 cubic yards of sand were dredged from shoals in the Columbia River during the dredging season just ended, according to Col. James U. Moorhead, Portland district engineer.

Adams warned the producers against the danger of violating the federal anti-trust laws in seeking too tight statewide control of milk prices, but the dairymen felt that price structures should be separate in each marketing area, and that cooperative control should extend only to mutual protection against dealers who tried to "play off" one area against another.

One of the biggest problems facing producers, and one which could be solved by a strong organization, is that of usage audits, the checks on distributors which show producers just what they have coming, it was pointed out. Another problem which an organization would ease is the problem of the disposal of surplus milk, and keeping the market for Grade A milk stable.

Bill Auel, manager of the Jackson County Milk Producers league, described the action taken last week when it was voted to maintain the going price to producers, and members agreed not to sell for less. The action
