Metal Industry Top Portland Employer

Portland —(U.P.)— The lumber industry no longer is the lead-ing employer in the Portland metropolitan area, a research agency said today.

The Stanford Research Insti-tute reported that the metal in-dustry has replaced the lumber industry in this capacity.

The report, prepared in co-operation with the Chamber of Commerce, also said Portland didn't experience a big retrench-ment after World War II. Be-tween 1947 and 1955 some 600 industrial firms and branch es-tablishments located in the area and about 400 firms expanded their operations. The report added that 237 of the former had since gone out of business.

Cornell Makes Study Of Royal Bee Jelly

Ithaca, N.Y. —(U.P.)— Cornell University wants to know if royal jelly is as good for people as it is for bees.

The university has set up 40 bee cages on the campus and is slowly scraping out the royal jelly—a sticky chemical that nurse bees make and queen bees eat.

Cornell's biologists want to learn if royal jelly really cures diseases and spruces up the skin—claims that have been made for it. So far, say the scientists, there is no "reliable and conclu-sive research" that backs up these claims, and there won't be any for many months. The ex-periments will take time.

The train was en route from Los Angeles to Chicago when the derailment occurred at 9:05 p.m. (PST), about 65 miles west of here.

None of the eight derailed cars, comprising the rear section of the train, overturned. The forward section, which remained on the rails, was used to bring the passengers here to board the substitute train.

CIO Woodmen Plan No Contract Demands

Portland —(U.P.)— A. F. Har-tung, president of the Interna-tional Woodworkers of America, (CIO), said today the Northwest Regional Policy committee of the Union had decided to make no additional demands at this time for 1955 contract negotia-tions.

A seven-man governors' fact-finding panel is studying 1954 demands of the union.

Hartung said the woodwork-ers had asked for a 12½ cen-t-an-hour pay increase, a third week of vacation and a job classification study. These de-mands are still before the parties he said.

CIO and AFL lumber unions and employers both have pre-sented their sides to the panel, with rebuttals scheduled Dec. 15-16.
