Every Day Said S-D Day in Washington

Olympia, Wash.—(UP)—President Eisenhower's Safe-Driving Day Dec. 15 won't mean quite as much to Washington State motorists as it does to those of other states.

For more than a year, every day has been an "S-D Day" because the governor got angry at highway killers.

The governor, Arthur B. Langlie, noting a mounting traffic death toll, threw the state's law enforcement agencies into a "war on killers who slay with cars instead of guns," on Nov. 1, 1953.

and Lecturer Vanderlip took charge. Other visitors who were non-Grange members were admitted to take part and enjoy a social evening and lively games. Refreshments were served at the close of the program.
