Around Hollywood

Hollywood — (U.P.) — Television comedy serials are biting the dust this season. But Mitzel Green has been brought out of semi-retirement for another new series that she thinks will last because it has the biggest set on TV.

The ex-child star was busy with her fourth baby at home and preparing another nightclub tour when NBC paged her for "So This Is Hollywood."

The series concerns a movie stunt girl, Mitzel, and a pretty extra, played by Virginia Gibson, and their adventures on the side-streets and backlots of the plaster city. This gives the series an excuse to use the most supercolossal settings on TV—the real-life Hollywood community.

Cover the Town "We just won't be setting around a living room for 23 episodes," said the actress, now 34. "We can go all over town or around our own studio for exteriors. It gives the show a big scope."

Producer Ed Beloin agrees many another TV comedy, including "Willy" and "That's My Boy," died partly because the plots couldn't afford to get away from the same chintz living room couch. "I Love Lucy," to avoid this way to viewer boredom, finally is getting the Ricardos and Mertzes out of their apartment house to travel cross-country to Hollywood via "process" scenes.

But Mitzel and the rest of the cast, at no big cost, can simply move into real-life Hollywood drug-stores, drive-ins, nightclubs, theaters and other local landmarks.

New Series of Warplanes To Join Navy Aerial Arsenal This Year

Washington—(U.P.)—Naval air power will take on a mighty new look this year as a whole new series of warplanes joins the fleet.

Latest addition to the Navy's aerial arsenal is a 600-mile-an-hour plus flying boat—the Seamaster.

The administration has given high priority to the buildup of Navy air strength.

Details on new atomic bombers, supersonic fighters and long-range transports were disclosed by Navy and industry officials here and during a recent tour of California installations.

Modernized aircraft carriers will begin next summer to launch their first 600 to 700 mile-an-hour jet bombers able to A-bomb targets well over 1000 miles away. The carriers will be defended by the Navy's first supersonic fighters, planes flying in the up to 800 mile-an-hour range.

New Water-Based Planes The Navy also is developing water-based bombers, fighters and transport planes, into a new type of air striking force that could play a vital role in future war.

The Navy was caught short of modern planes when the Korean war broke. Now the admirals are confident they have a batch of planes in all categories that can handle any enemy.

Two new bombers and two fighters are stars of the upcoming carrier-based forces.

The Douglas A3D Skywarrior, a 70,000-pound giant, is described as "designed to fly at faster speeds" over longer distances and with a greater striking load than any other known aircraft of its weight or size. It can fly more than 2500 miles and has a speed of 600 to 700 mph. It will go into service next summer as the Navy's "basic atom bomber."

The Air Force also has ordered the plane, calling it the B-66. Bantam-Size Bomber

Also going into service next summer is the Douglas A4D Skyhawk, a "bantam" size bomber so small it can be stowed aboard ship without folding wings. Able to span the continent without refueling, the little atomic bomber flies more than 600 miles an hour. It can be refueled in flight.

In the fighter department, the Navy will send to shipboard squadrons in about six months the Douglas F4
