Geary Advises Chairmen on How To Speed Session

Salem — (U.P.)—Speaker of the House Edward A. Geary held an unprecedented parley with his committee chairmen yesterday afternoon and gave them some advice on how to expedite the session.

He expressed concern over the fact that only 90 bills had been introduced in the House as against 137 on the same date two years ago. Then he said: "It's not because I want more bills, but because I know there are many bills that will be introduced and I don't want them to come in a big pile."

Rep. W. W. Chadwick of Salem said more than 700 requests for drafting bills had already been filed with the legislative counsel, and Geary said he would confer with Sam Haley, the legislative counsel, to ascertain the situation in that office and report back to the house.

Geary also said he wanted as few executive sessions as possible. Those are the ones where the public is invited to leave while members deliberate. He said: "You will find that you will receive far less criticism if you have open meetings and give the people an opportunity to hear what is going on."

Mann Sees Time Saver
The speaker urged committee chairman not to bring to the floor bills that the committee members knew had no chance of passage.
Rep. E. H. Mann of Medford suggested that much legislative time could be saved if committees of both Houses sat in on important hearings.

Rep. Loran L. Stewart of Cottage Grove, chairman of the House Taxation Committee, said the Senate and House tax committees planned many joint hearings on important bills.

Use of members of the Oregon Bar Committee in conducting research work on bills requested by legislators was suggested by Rep. George Layman of Newberg, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. This group of attorneys who donate their time to assist the legislators, Layman said, were not busy now and would be glad to prepare memoranda for the legislative counsel's office, thus handle the research work and saving that office much time in preparation of bills.

Army Men Visiting In City This Week

Jim Grey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Grey, 42 South Barneburg rd., and Richard H. Boltz, both Army privates first class, arrived Thursday evening to visit with the Greys.

Boltz will leave Saturday, and Grey will remain for a longer visit.
Both came here from Ft. Sill, Okla., where they received training with the field artillery for about a year. They both will leave in late February for Germany.

Boltz, who was born in Prussia and lived in Europe for 21 years, was held prisoner by the Communists during the close of World War II. He escaped from behind the Iron Curtain and came to the United States, then joined the Army. His home now is at Pasco, Wash., and he received his citizenship papers last summer.
