

COMON TO OUR MARDI GRAS—Margarita Parker of San Salvador (left) and Annabel Tinocco of Managua, Nicaragua visit with John Wayne on movie set of Blood Alley at China Camp near San Francisco. The girls are touring the area with invitations to a day long "Mardi Gras" at Bay Meadows Feb. 5 in nearby San Mateo where they will put on demonstration of Central American folk dances. The Mardi Gras is undertaken by ambitious teen-agers of Serra High School to provide funds for athletic equipment for their new school. Shortly after this photo was made, Wayne fell from a gangplank, suffering injury that hospitalized him.

Woman Weds Killer Who Faces 14 Years In Stateville Prison

Chicago (U.P.)—Convict Edward Pruszewski, who must serve up to 14 more years in prison for killing his first wife, yesterday married the woman who helped save him from the electric chair.

Pruszewski, 32, was led into the chambers of Criminal Court Judge B. Fain Tucker with handcuffs on his wrists.

The manacles were removed long enough for Judge Tucker to marry him to 32-year-old Stella Gubala, the woman who became Pruszewski's "whole life" since he stabbed his first wife in 1948.

Lonely Honeymoons

The bride and groom looked forward to loney honeymoons. Pruszewski was to be sent to Stateville Penitentiary to serve out his term. His bride will wait for him in Chicago.

But neither the bride nor the groom let the years, they may have to spend apart discourage them.

Like any other bride, Stella went on a gay party with her girl friends Sunday night. Pruszewski spent the night before his marriage lodged in Cook County Jail.

"We're just two people who love each other," Stella had said earlier.

Stella has stood by Pruszewski ever since he went to prison. At one point he was sentenced to die. She helped finance his appeal and even typed his legal briefs with the result that the State Supreme Court granted a new trial just 48 hours before the scheduled execution.

Originally Faced Death

Pruszewski, a naval veteran, stabbed his first wife with a butcher knife as they embraced.

At first he was declared insane, but the death penalty was imposed after he regained his reason.

At the end of his new trial early this month, Pruszewski was sentenced to 14 years' imprisonment.

However, his lawyer hopes to obtain a parole next year on the grounds that Pruszewski has been in custody ever since the slaying.

Stella has known Pruszewski for 10 years. When questioned about the death of his first wife, she says "I don't hold that against him."

Means of Improving Tourist Industry In Area Discussed

The value of the tourist industry to Oregon and things that can be done to improve it was the topic discussed at yesterday's noon Chamber of Commerce roundtable discussion by the main speaker.

Mrs. Agnes Berry, president of the Jackson County Motel Owners association, emphasized that one of the biggest tourist complaints along the Rogue river is the high cost of a non-resident fishing license for just a few minutes fishing time.

Would Increase Revenue

She said that the present cost of $5 for one week's angling could be lowered to "even $1 a day," and the State Game commission would "receive more money than before." She added that as it stands now, "the people feel they are being taken."

Other factors which will aid in keeping tourists in the area an extra day, the speaker continued, include modern highway construction, historical markers and well-marked turnoffs.

Mrs. Berry suggested that local residents could aid the tourist business by knowing at least one place of interest to recommend. She added that "courtesy" really counts in making people return again to the Rogue valley for their vacations. She cited one couple from North Carolina who have returned to the valley three times in seven years, staying at the Berry motel, Rogue Woods, near Trail.

New Rail Service

Robert Holmes, district freight and passenger agent for Southern Pacific, spoke briefly on the inauguration of motor trailer on railroad flatcar shipments, called "piggyback" service to the Northwest.

Next Monday's roundtable luncheon will concern Pacific Telephone and Telegraph's growth in the area and Oregon, as well as the weekly swapping of "rumors" in the Rogue valley. All meetings are in the Jackson hotel.

Physician Tells of Sterilizing Cancerous Bone in Girl's Leg

Los Angeles (U.P.)—A North Hollywood physician told yesterday how he removed a cancerous bone from the thigh of a 20-year-old girl, cooked it in a sterilizer to kill the growth as she lay on the operating table and then replaced it in her leg.

Dr. Vernon P. Thompson first told of the operation Saturday before a convention of 2000 physicians of the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgery.

He said the girl had a localized cancer in a 6 inch piece of bone. He said he was reluctant to use plastic or metal parts for the missing bone because the woman, at 20, had a long life expectancy and there was no assurance substitutes would last that long.

Hip Joint Frozen
Thompson said the hip joint had to be frozen for the rare and dramatic operation.

He cut a 6.4 inch piece of the femur out, put it in a steam pressure sterilizer to kill the cancerous cells and then fitted it back in, using two metal screws to toenail it into the bone on the lower end and forming a graft with bone shavings in the hip joint.

The bone itself was deadened by the heat, but during the time the woman was bedridden a framework of blood cells and tissues to grow upon formed.

Thompson said the girl spent nine months in bed before being able to walk on crutches following the first operation. When she did begin walking with crutches the bone cracked but in succeeding operations he strengthened it with a splint from the girl's shin bone.

Walks Slowly

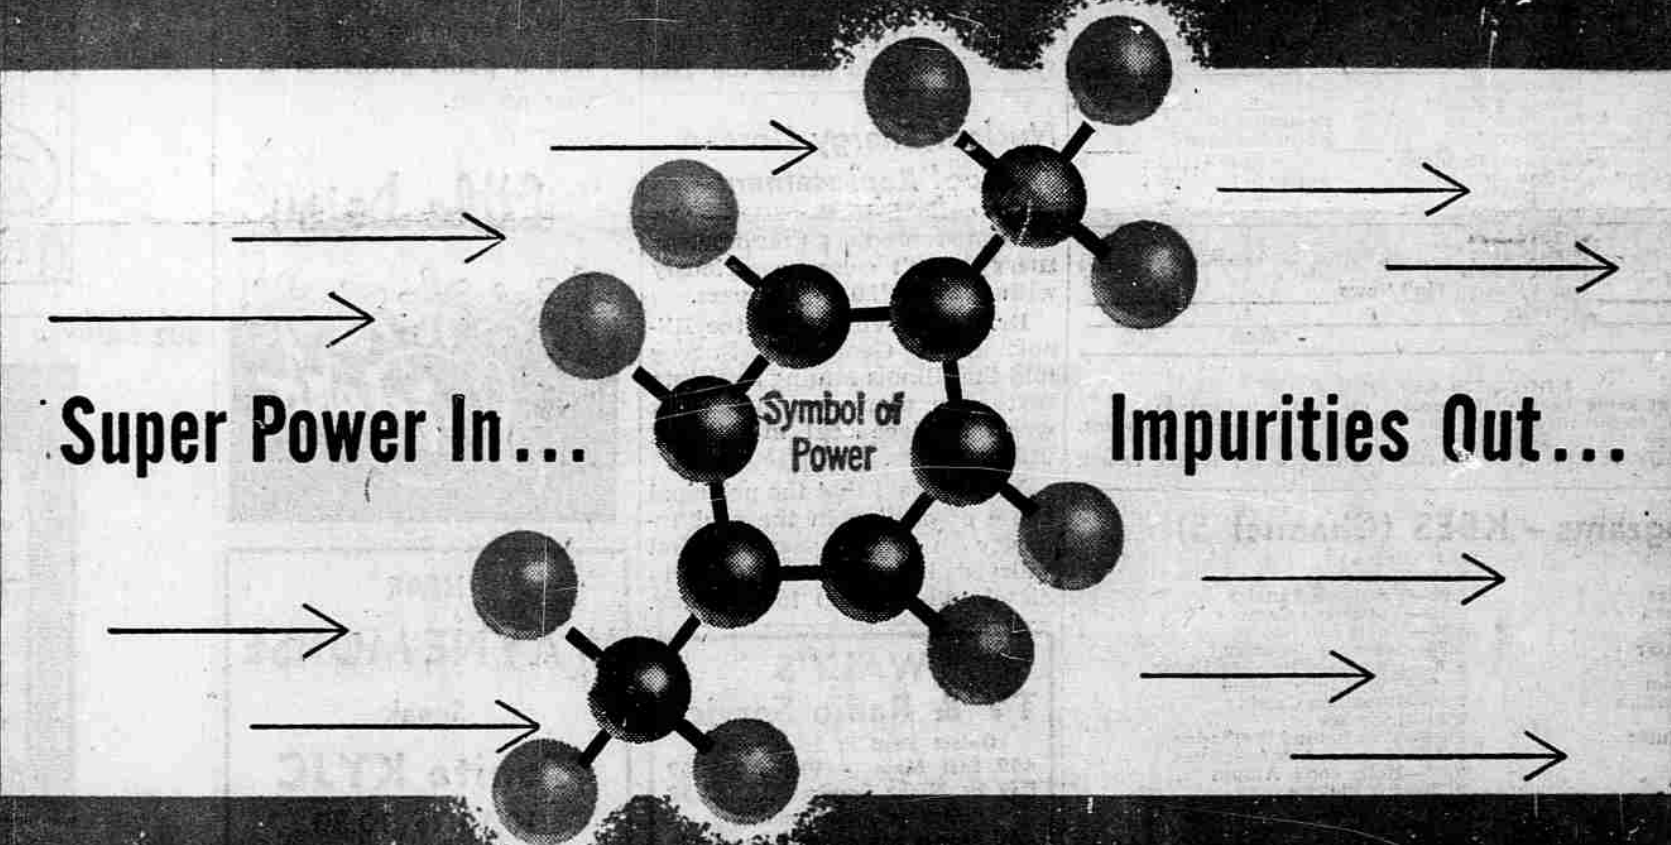

He said she now is able to walk slowly with a noticeable limp and is working at a full-time job.

Thompson, now retired, was on the staff of the Los Angeles County hospital when he performed the surgery five years ago.

Such an operation had never before been tried because of the extreme rarity of the type of cancer the girl suffered, and Dr. Thompson said he has no knowledge that it has been tried since.

Ontario, Ore. — (U.P.)—Rural area residents of Vale and Ontario are agitating for organization of a road district because of a "vital need for improvement of rural roads."
