'Skid Row Attorney' Gets Invitation to LA Banquet

Chicago — (U.P.) — Lawyer William G. Wood, who is making a comeback from Chicago's skid row as a $5 a day day adviser, is going to be guest of honor at the greater Los Angeles, Calif., Press Club banquet.

The invitation to the club's "Eight Ball Dinner," which arrived Friday carried the condition that Wood, a once-distinguished law professor, stay sober until the banquet, six months from now.

Judge Confident — But Judge Hyman Feldman, who started the 65-year-old Wood on his comeback with a job as his adviser on skid row cases, was confident his new counselor would meet the condition.

"Mr. Wood will be there, and sober," Feldman said. "The way he's improved in just two weeks thrills me to death."

"He's up in my office right now, working on a brief, and doing a good job, too."

Feldman, who also was invited to the dinner, said "I accepted for both of us, and I'm sure Mr. Wood will be there."

Wood, who once taught at Kent College of Law here and was a distinguished attorney, shuffled into Feldman's court two weeks ago on drunk charges and told of drinking himself on to skid row two years ago "because of trouble at home."

Offered Job — After he demonstrated to Feldman that he "still had it" by defending a fellow skid row delinquent, Feldman offered Wood $5 a day out of his own pocket to serve him as an adviser.

Wood showed up in a clean shirt and tie the next Monday and has been in court regularly and sober each day since.

Wood's invitation included an offer of a week's vacation in California as the club's guest.

At Los Angeles, club president Bill Pigue said the members through the invitation "might give Wood an additional incentive for remaining sober."

Rain, Snow Moving East Over Nation

A vast band of precipitation stretching from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada moved eastward Saturday to the western slopes of the Appalachians.

Meanwhile, wide areas of the Great Plains and the Midwest shoveled out from the winter's heaviest snowfall, which left more than a foot of new snow at many points.

Snow continued Saturday over most of the Great Lakes region. Snow, freezing rain and rain fell along the Ohio valley, with rain general to the south.

Thunderstorms broke out along the gulf coast of Louisiana and Texas. New Orleans got 3.48 inches of rain in six hours. Heavy rain also fell at Lake Charles, La., and Beaumont, Tex.

Meanwhile the Arctic air mass which gave the East coast sub-zero weather earlier this week was losing its grip. Temperatures along the Atlantic seaboard Saturday generally were 10 degrees higher.

But a new cold wave sent the mercury down to 1 degree above zero at Aberdeen, S.D.

Dead line Sunday Classified is at noon Saturday; 10 a.m. Monday for Monday; other days 5:30 previous day.
