

No Dividends Paid By Railroad Line

Cassville, Mo. —(U.P.)— There was no dividend for stockholders, but the operators of the Cassville & Exeter Railroad said they didn't mind.

There's something about running a railroad that stirs the imagination of man even when it's only a 4.8 mile one.

"We're keeping a couple of jumps ahead of the sheriff," said Fielding P. Sizer, president of the C. & E. "It's fun. Not every man has the opportunity to be running a railroad, you know."

The C. & E. labors upgrade from Cassville to Exeter to pick up whatever freight has been dropped off at Exeter, Mo., by the big Frisco. The Frisco gives its rejected ties to the C. & E., which has not been shy about accepting them.

"We're not proud," Sizer said. The C. & E. got a real break when it came upon James Ashley. He is the road's manager and a former short-line operator from Vermont. Furthermore, his wife, Olive, has served as brakeman, switchman, and general assistant on many runs to Exeter.

'Perfect Husband' Makes Wife Angry

Parents are likely to side with their married children against their in-laws, and this makes for trouble in a family.

(Q) "I have been married for seven years to a man who is a good worker, provides well for me and our children, and doesn't drink, smoke, or go around with other women. My parents are always telling me how lucky I am and praising my husband to the skies in front of him, especially when their friends are around. This makes me a bit angry at times because they don't know the whole story."

"My husband is a good provider, I admit that, but I have to fuss and beg to get a cent out of him. He is very stingy and is always complaining about the money I spend. Then, too, he is faithful but he is insanely jealous of me. Every time I go out with one of my girl friends, he accuses me of meeting some man instead. This usually leads to a quarrel and he calls me dreadful names. Should I tell my parents the other side of the picture? I am often tempted to when they paint him in such glowing colors."

(A) I strongly urge you to resist the temptation. I am sure your parents realize that you have your troubles, just as all other married people do. But in their eyes your husband's good features outweigh his bad ones, and they are delighted that you have married a man they can feel proud of.

Should you tell them about your husband's stinginess, jealousies, and name-calling, I am sure it would be a great shock to them. And, because they have always admired him, it might make them turn against him so strongly that a hostile feeling would develop.

This would make things very unpleasant for you and the children, for your husband would bitterly resent your carrying tales to your parents. Keep your personal affairs to yourself as you have in the past and things will be better for all concerned.
