Teen-age Daughter Loves Boy In Jail

Parents make a mistake when they do not give their teenage children credit for having common sense.

(Q) "My daughter, who is 15½ years old, is very much in love with a boy who made news copy just last month for robbery. She does not know that I know this. I found out quite by accident, although I was wondering about the great influx of mail which I now know was coming from jail where this boy is. He is only 16. I work and did not realize how much she was seeing him. "I definitely want this broken off, as I now realize it is getting to a serious stage. She has hinted that she has already picked out the person she wants to marry sometime. She writes him constantly and I suspect she is sending him her lunch money. For the past week I have been making her take sandwiches to school on the excuse that I had some bills to pay. Is there any way I can break this up without having the feeling that I have done wrong to her? I would like it to be finished with the feeling on her part that it was something she wanted to end." (A) This is certainly not the "psychological moment" to try

Dr. Hurlock

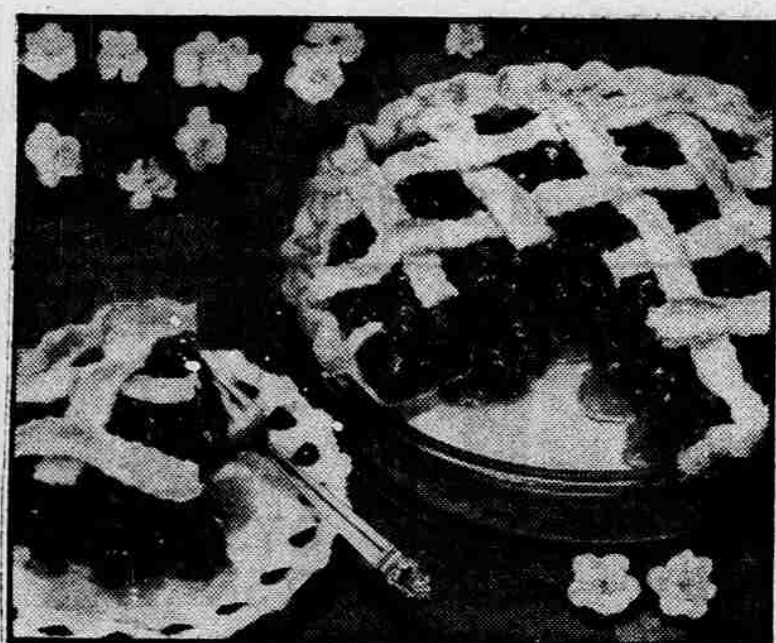

To end your daughter's romance. To her this boy is a martyr, wrongly treated by society for an act he didn't do. I am sure he has convinced her that he is innocent. However, it certainly must be ended sooner or later, and the sooner the better. You are wise to want her to be the one to end it, so she will not reproach you. Let things ride temporarily, until he gets out of jail. Then keep a watchful eye on the situation. In the meantime you can do a lot to make her see how impossible such a marriage would be. Emphasize how much money it takes to support a family, how hard it is for a boy to get a job if he doesn't have a clean slate, and how often juvenile delinquents become adult criminals.

You do not have to tell her you know about this boy's being in jail, but she will sooner or later put two and two together and realize what a risk such a marriage would be for her.

What every good cook knows:

Just a little difference in ingredients makes a big difference in cooking results

Snowdrift is just a little lighter than any other shortening—and that can make the big difference in lighter, more digestible foods, whether baked or fried.

Snowdrift is pre-whipped just a little longer than ordinary shortenings. That can make the big difference in easier, quicker cutting-in for flaky, tender pastry every time.

Snowdrift's ingredients are just a little costlier than any other solid shortening's (yet you pay no more). That can make the big difference in better tasting foods for your family.

No other shortening at any price is so creamy, so digestible — and so light!
