Hollywood — (U.P.) — Gregory Peck isn't interested in money anymore. From now on, the world-roamer said, he's working "for stimulus and adventure."
Peck, home to stay after nearly three years of acting overseas, wound up his tour with "Moby Dick," a motion picture that will go down in film history for its troubles and colorful drama that went on behind the camera.

Magnuson Requests Change in Review Of CAB's Decisions

Washington — (U.P.) — Sen. Warren G. Magnuson has asked Congress to revoke the President's right to review Civil Aeronautics Board decisions except in "cases involving national defense and foreign policy."

The Washington Democrat's measure also would open the door for non-scheduled airlines to be given recognition as regular supplemental carriers under CAB regulation.

Magnuson is chairman of the Senate Commerce committee which would consider the bill to overhaul the 1938 Civil Aeronautics act.
His proposal would give the CAB discretionary authority to recognize "non-scheduled" airlines in a special class known as "supplemental air service carriers."

The board also would be authorized to issue "certificates of public convenience and necessity" to such airlines defining the "type and extent of supplemental service" they could provide.

Approval Required
Under present law, the President is required to approve all franchises granted by the CAB to U.S. airlines for schedules and routes outside the country. He does not have to review domestic route decisions.
Magnuson was a leading critic of a recent White House decision which denied Northwest Airlines a Seattle-Honolulu route but let Pan-American airways to continue to fly the same route. The decision later was modified to certify both carriers.

The film's 65-foot phony whale sank, actor Richard Basehart broke a leg, actor Leo Genn was injured, storms battered the company, and Peck was dunked in the ocean. For seven months adventurous director John Huston led his sea-soaked actors and technicians from Ireland to Wales to London to the Canary Islands and almost to Africa, if a second thought hadn't stopped him.

Greatest Adventure
But all this discomfort to Peck was "really living."
"We shared an adventure, the greatest adventure I've ever had," Peck said with a bit of nostalgia as he sat, warm and dry, at his hotel.

"Unless a movie has some kind of stimulus or new idea I'm just not interested any more. I've made all the hack pictures I'm ever going to make. I'd rather do something I like on a straight salary than 'The Indians Ride Again' on 66 per cent of the gross."

The company's darkest hour was the 11 weeks' location for the whaling sequences off the coast of Wales.

"Every day we went out, but we had only 10 good weather days," said Peck. "The boat (built by Walt Disney for 'Treasure Island') was top heavy because of the length of the mast, and when it got too stormy we were chased in."

"People got seasick. Then the tow line broke on our whale which had been made of wood, wiring and a rubberized material covering the hull of a ship. Two men nearly drowned trying to save it. The waves were 20 feet high."

Others Nearly Lost
"We also lost two masts, and if they had fallen minutes before, the 18 men on them would have been lost, too."

"I thought it would be a trick shot in miniature, but that was a little treat Huston had been saving for me," grinned Peck. "Darned if he didn't tie me on the side of the whale and roll me under the water."

The film, scheduled for 12 weeks of shooting, took 30. The budget, says Peck, "was never taken too seriously." Occasionally the men who put up the money dropped in "to see what we were doing."

"They were worried," he smiled. "But after they saw how great the film was, they'd leave."
Peck, I noticed, picked up a few continental habits on his trip, such as wine with lunch and a collection of art objects and paintings. Another acquisition, French lady journalist Veronique Pessani, is due to visit him next month.

News and Notes From Camp White

By SID HOLLINGSWORTH
George Tallmadge has set out on another of his adventures in cross country traveling. He left early this month headed for Florida, but he has been talking about spending some time in Mexico where living is cheaper and life is less exacting. In any event, he will be in the deep south for a while gathering up new ideas about people and making new friends. He didn't say when he would be back, having taken a discharge from the military.

Acting Manager R. H. Denning made a report of his attendance at the conference of managers of the 11 western states at Los Angeles last week, at the regular meeting of the VAVS in the Elks Temple Monday night.

In addition to the managers, the meeting was attended by Administrator of Veterans Affairs H. V. Higley, Admiral Boone, retiring medical director, and his successor, Dr. William Middleton.

Administrator Higley discussed matters dealing with public relations and economy under budget limitations.

Cliff Howard, hospital chairman of the Elks, was appointed general chairman of the Hobby Fair to be held Sunday, April 17, this year. It is expected to be a "bang up" affair with greater interest than ever in exhibiting the products of member craftsmanship.

The volunteers initiated a movement to organize a Garden club which is now under way with a program of planting and garden cultivation in prospect. The new club will be affiliated with the state garden clubs, it is announced.

Plans for the new picnic area were discussed at the meeting. It was learned that 35 trees, including birches, sycamores and red maples have been pledged for early planting by the Navy Mothers of Medford and Central Point, the American Legion and auxiliary, the VFW auxiliary and the Military Order of Lady Bugs.

Arrangements were made to prepare copies of the revised plans for the picnic grounds to be considered by the committee in charge. Plans are also being made available of buildings and cooking facilities.

An open meeting has been scheduled for March with the showing of the film "Within the Town" and talks to be made by domiciliary staff members and a panel of volunteers.

The VFW auxiliary variety show Wednesday night featured the Eagle Point high school band under direction of Steve Whipple.

The firing squad and color guard were commended recently by Conger-Morris for providing the ceremony requested for military funerals.

Power Pool Center Moved to Portland

Portland — (U.P.) — Bonneville Power Administration engineers this week completed the transfer of the Northwest power pool dispatching center from Vancouver, Wash., to Portland.

Moved from the J. D. Ross substation, where it had been located for the past 15 years, the dispatch center was installed at BPA headquarters here in the new Lloyd building.

The center controls the routing of power from all federal hydroelectric power projects in the Columbia basin, and the transmitting system has more than 6800 miles of high-voltage lines and 169 substations.

The area served by the pool includes all of Washington, half of Oregon, and parts of Idaho, Montana and British Columbia.

wife and young son "Skipper" will arrive later. He is a Denver University product and claims Pueblo, Colorado, as his home town.

Keep Hands Off Of Foreign Policy, Military Warned

Quantico, Va. — (U.P.) — Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) a proud former leatherneck, told it to the Marines Saturday: let civilians run foreign policy.

Mansfield's remarks were prepared for a batch of new second lieutenants graduating from the Marine Corps schools, but they were aimed at all career military men.

The Montana Democrat, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, warned military leaders to shun politics also, lest they lose the confidence of the people in their unbiased military judgment.

"Military leaders ought not to assume that military training provides an automatic background for politics, whether national or international," said Mansfield, "and they ought not, in the formulation and conduct of foreign policy, to exceed the powers of their appointive offices."

Power Reserves
"The role of the military in foreign policy," he said, "is to provide a reserve of power to support negotiations concerning our just interests in the world, and to defend those interests if attacked."

But the President and the Secretary of State, not the military, must determine "what our interests are, and when and how they are to be defended," Mansfield added.

ROK Warship Seizes Japanese Fishing Boat

Maji, Japan — (U.P.) — A Japanese fishing boat was seized by a Republic of Korea warship Saturday in the East China Sea, 90 miles southeast of Cebu Island, a Maritime Safety Board patrol ship reported.

The patrol ship said that a second Japanese fishing boat "disappeared" after being chased by a 100-ton R.O.K. warship.

Vice-President Leaves Honduras

Tegucigalpa, Honduras — (U.P.) — Ailing Vice-President Richard M. Nixon left Honduras Saturday for Nicaragua, sixth stop on his goodwill tour of Central America and the Caribbean.

Nixon and his party are scheduled to leave for Managua on board his special plane. In addition to Honduras, he already has visited Cuba, Mexico, Guatemala, and El Salvador.

Although suffering from a cold, Nixon carried out his complete schedule on the last day of his visit to Honduras. He motored some 50 miles over dusty, winding mountain roads for the commencement exercises at the Pan American Institute of Agriculture.

In his address to the graduates Nixon included an appeal to private companies in Central America to aid social and economic development in the area by shunning a "profits only" motivation.
