

COLEMAN ELECTED—Hugh H. Coleman, left, above, president of Crater Lake Motors in Medford, recently was elected to the board of directors of the Ford Dealers' Advertising association. The association is an organization representing the combined advertising campaigns of some 169 Ford dealers in southern Oregon, northern California, and western Nevada. Coleman succeeds Elmer Balsiger, right, above, Klamath Falls, a veteran of many years service in the organization. Coleman will act as spokesman for Ford dealers in eight southern Oregon and three northern California counties.

Paramedics Battle Alaskan Blizzard

Anchorage, Alaska — (U.P.) — Two paramedics, marooned on a mountain of death a stone's throw from the bodies of 11 Navy men who died in a plane crash, battled a furious Alaskan blizzard and stark loneliness today while awaiting rescue.

"It's a tough assignment," said a military spokesman.

For the past 24 hours there has been no word from M-Sgt. F. R. Sackrider, Topeka, Kan., and Airman 1-C, R. L. Josephson, Grants Pass, Ore., who parachuted to the treacherous east slope of Mount Susitna Saturday near the wreckage of a Navy Neptune.

They have ample food and survival gear and presumably have dug into deep drifts near the crash scene while awaiting help from Elmendorf Air Force Base here.

NO NOTES

Indianapolis — (U.P.) — Thieves stole 11-year-old Tommy Burlash's trumpet from a plating company where the instrument was waiting to be reburnished. However, it wasn't of much value because Tommy's father had taken the valves out before delivering it to the firm.

On The Side

Each kiss of yours creates desire
Your breath inflames love's fire
And wakes the sleeping soul:
Such a kiss to be I find.
The conversation of the mind
And whisper of the soul.

Why is it so many generously proportioned females are partial to wearing pants or slacks in public? According to an expert on feminine fashions and appearance, the only women who should wear slacks or pants in public are those having the following measurements: "bust 34, waist 22 to 24, and hips 34."

Get It Right

Tallulah Bankhead, the intensely whimsical Broadwayite, is fond of claiming she was named after a waterfall. And that she was the first girl in this country named Tallulah. There were girls named Tallulah in this country before Miss Bankhead was born. For example, Tallulah le Conte Elston, distinguished resident of Carmel, Calif. Also Tallulah Downey of Beaumont, Tex., who says: "I was ushered into the world several years before Miss Bankhead and I am not named after a waterfall."

Sidelights

Too much time is wasted by people trying to spot house numbers in the dark. Put illuminated house numbers on your place and give messenger boys, delivery men and taxi drivers a break . . . who was Paul Baudecroix? If your wife cannot answer that question, she should blush for her ignorance. Baudecroix invented the indelible lipstick.

Etiquette

"As to whether a man should take his hat off in an elevator, when women are present" writes a New Yorker, "never again for me! I took my hat off in a department store elevator the other day and as I did so I heard two women wisecrack about my being baldheaded."

A Delightful Spot

"Am on an island with a population of 5,000, which has no newspapers, no banks, no politicians, no crimes, no taxes, and no worries. A delightful spot." So writes Capt. A. G. Graham of the good ship African Enterprise. The island referred to is St. Helena where Napoleon Bonaparte spent his last days. The St. Helena stamps on the captain's letter are most artistic. No doubt they are popular with stamp collectors.

Asking

Queries from clients. Q. Don't you agree that wearing a black nightgown makes a tall red haired woman look like a "femme fatale"? A. Madame, kindly spare my blushes. I have never known a red haired woman that well. However, our policy is to try never to turn a client away without an answer. I will have our horses and women experts check with husbands of red haired women and report their opinions in a later issue.

Ernest Henderson, top man of the Sheraton chain of hotels. The Henderson hoteliers are named after Thomas Sheraton, the inventor of the twin bed. There should be a portrait of the old boy and his original twin bed in the lobbies of all Sheraton hotels.

Tiny Show Shows

What was the smallest theater in which you saw a regular professional theatrical performance? Believe smallest in my experience was the Punch and Judy theatre in New York. That playhouse had less than 200 seats. I saw Roland Young there in a play titled "Roll of the Wild Oat." The theatre De La Huchette in Paris seats only eighty-two people. Yet, there was presented there a musical extravaganza in thirty-two scenes.

Waldport Man Killed By Auto Near S. F.

San Francisco — (U.P.) — Cyrus C. Clay, 66, of Waldport, Ore., was killed last night while crossing the coast highway at Rockaway Beach, 15 miles south of here.

Driver of the car that hit Clay was John J. Cupit, 49, of Pedro Valley, San Mateo county. He was hospitalized with a broken collar bone and multiple cuts and bruises.

California Highway Patrolman Duke Worsham said Cupit's car hurled Clay into the air and into the windshield, causing it to shatter. Cupit lost control of the car, swerving off the highway and into a ditch.

Legislative Letter

By ERIC ALLEN JR.
Mail Tribune City Editor

Salem—E. A. (Al) Littrell, who is serving his first term as a Jackson county legislator, says he knows he's a freshman at this business of making laws—and is acting accordingly.

Ordinarily a quiet man, Al has taken the position that his job this session is to listen, to study, and to vote his convictions and as his constituents want.

He's been a co-sponsor or sponsor of only two bills so far this session, one which would provide for compulsory and regular inspection of automobiles, and the other one which would liberalize the regulations having to do with casting absentee ballots. (The latter was introduced at the suggestion of Mrs. Bereth P. Hopkins, Jackson county clerk. Littrell reported, and he said it appears unlikely that it can be cleared through the legislature, at least partly because the support promised Mrs. Hopkins by other county clerks has not materialized.)

Meat Inspection Measure

One of Al's interests during the session has been a state meat inspection measure, which is supported by the Southern Oregon Meat Packers association. Orrin L. Brown, of the Medford Meat company, has been one of the strong supporters of the bill.

Al is dubious about the chances of this one, too, unless it can be made self-supporting. As drawn, it calls for a general fund appropriation to pay the cost of inspection, an estimated $400,000 annually, and with money as tight as it is around this session, the powerful ways and means committee likely will not allow it to go through.

If, however, it could be changed to call for a 10 or 15 per cent hundredweight fee, at time of slaughter, to pay the costs, Al said he thinks the bill would have a chance.

Another bill in which Al is interested is one submitted by the Organized Trailer Owners of Oregon, who recently employed Attorney Edward C. Kelly, Medford, to draw up their measure, to change the basis on which trailer homes are taxed.

Littrell said Monday he has been informed that the House rules committee will not approve introduction of the bill. (The deadline for bills being introduced by individual members has passed, and all new ones must get the approval of the rules committee.)

Delayed Too Long

This is a case where a measure has been delayed too long in being submitted to a representative, and while this decision could be reversed, it is unlikely that it will be.

Al and the charming Mrs. Littrell are leaving this week for California, where he has business, and where she is going to visit her grandchildren.

"I'll really get lobbied down there," she remarked.

E. H. (Ed) Mann, the "dean" of Jackson county's delegation, is chairman of the House elections and reapportionment committee, which Monday afternoon held a hearing on House Bill 347, having to do with the filing of campaign expenses by candidates and their committees.

The hearing was particularly interesting because of the associations of those connected with the bill and who appeared to testify regarding it.

It was introduced by Mrs. Maurine Neuberger wife of Oregon's new junior senator, and by Elmer Deetz, Canby, the "gallon-jug" dairyman who was as responsible as any man for the milk control law last November.

Mrs. Neuberger presented the bill for the committee's consideration, pointing out that the principle of filing campaign expenditures and contributions before, as well as after, an election, is well established elsewhere, and gives the voters a chance to see who is supporting whom, and spending how much doing it, before the votes are cast.

McCall Testifies

One of those testifying regarding the bill was Tom McCall, Portland newspaperman and radio commentator who was defeated in his campaign for election to Congress at the last general election by Mrs. Edith Green. McCall, too, supported the principle of such election expenses being filed before the election, but warned the committee that the law should have some teeth to prevent inequities arising when one "naive and well-intentioned candidate" follows the letter of the law, and his opponent doesn't.

James T. Marr, executive secretary of the Oregon State Federation of Labor, and C. C. Chapman, editor of the Oregon State Federation of Labor, and

C. C. Chapman, editor of the Oregon Voter (two men whose opinions are diametrically opposed on many—perhaps most—issues of public importance), joined in opposing one provision of the measure which, they felt, was unworkable, unenforceable and discriminatory.

This provision says: "Each candidate . . . shall have but one political committee and such subcommittees as are deemed necessary. Such committees shall at all times be under the direct control and complete supervision of the political committee . . ."

Both Marr and Chapman pointed out that this would, in effect, prevent any group from getting together in support of a candidate and still keeping their freedom of action.

Final Witness

The final witness before Mann's committee was Ted Tibbett of the State Republican Central committee, who also objected to provisions of the bill in its present form.

Mann announced that further hearings will be conducted on the measure. And it looks as though it will be considerably amended before it is ever reported to the floor of the house for action.

It's impossible for any one newspaperman to "cover the legislature." In this press room (which was so quiet on Sunday afternoon) there are now about a dozen men and women, all busily engaged in reporting one phase or another of the many activities which go on as the 90 members from all over the state gather to consider proposals for new laws.

About all one person can do is to pick out particular areas of interest and try to convey some of the sense of what goes on.

Barrington Report

For instance, this morning I sat on a public hearing regarding the so-called "Barrington report," which is a massive document prepared by a New York research firm on the make-up of state employees' salaries.

The hearing was conducted by Dr. Orval Eaton, state representative, and Sen. John Merrifield (both of them occasional Medford visitors, by the way) of the joint ways and means committee.

The meeting was to bring state department heads up to date on progress being made in getting the report in shape for submission to the legislature. It was obvious that many of the state employees are upset by the report, and by its implications, whereby some employees are reduced in salary, some raised, and some kept where they are.

To this observer it looks doubtful that the report will be adopted in its entirety, for it is

Summer Schedule Of Classes Set On Campus at SOC

Ashland — The 1955 summer session schedule at Southern Oregon college has been released by Registrar Mabel W. Winston and lists a total of nine courses which may be taken for graduate courses and a whole range of courses on the undergraduate level.

Graduate Courses

Graduate courses to be offered include Audio-visual aids, remedial reading, school finance, principles and practice of curriculum construction, administration of the elementary school, supervision of the elementary school, observation of teaching, advanced Shakespeare, and Shakespearean Festival Players' workshop.

Undergraduate courses are to be offered in Art, Music, Education, Psychology, Health and Physical Education, English and Speech, Science, and the Social Sciences.

Workshops are also to be given in several fields, including conservation education, health education, language arts, teaching of Spanish in the elementary grades, the social sciences, guidance and counseling, audio-visual aids, mental health, creative art, remedial reading and special education. A post-session is to be devoted to methods of teaching elementary school subjects.

Two courses in library science are to be given, including classification and cataloging, and library experience program.

Enrollment for the summer session will be on June 13 and the session will continue to August 5. The post session will be from August 8 to 26.

too far along in the session for the report to be completely rewritten, and there is too much obligation to particular phases of it to be ignored.

My suggestion to the several hundred state employees in Jackson county would be: Breathe a little easier.

There's even some talk, among both employees of the state and newsmen who have followed the progress of the report, that the entire project, which cost the state some $50,000, can be written off as a bad job.

MUSICIANS TRAVEL

Eureka, Calif. — (U.P.) — Music means so much to the residents of this sparsely populated part of Humboldt County that some of the 60 members of the Humboldt Little Symphony travel 130 miles weekly to attend rehearsals. Made up of housewives, ministers, teachers and retired persons, the Little Symphony has been making music in the northernmost part of California since 1933.

Hearing Aid Authority To Hold FREE Consultations Medford - FEBRUARY 25

LEONARD HARTMAN, a recognized hearing aid authority will hold free consultations to help the hard of hearing with their hearing problems. Mr. Hartman will explain why hearing losses are as different as finger prints, and as an added service, Mr. Hartman will rate your hearing on Belton's exclusive audio-selector, the electronic instrument that determines the pattern of hearing losses and shows how a correctly fitted Triple Transistor Belton Hearing Aid will improve ones hearing ability.

Mr. Hartman is a Hearing Aid Audiologist, and has shown many people how to enjoy a fuller, richer, happier life by helping them overcome their handicap of deafness. The broad knowledge Mr. Hartman has obtained through his many experiences as a hearing aid consultant will be at your disposal. There will be no cost or obligation for his services during the time he will be in Medford.

Each person who consults Mr. Hartman will be given a complimentary copy of the booklet "Hear Again." This book is used by countless thousands of Belton Hearing Aid users throughout the country, and many of the local schools and institutions as a guide to help the hearing aid users get the utmost benefit from his or her hearing aid, because it teaches them how to regulate their hearing aids, how to overcome background noises, and how to adjust themselves to the new world of sound opened up about them. Mr. Hartman will hold his consultations at the Jackson Hotel in Medford, on Friday, February 25th, from 1 P.M. to 8 P.M. No appointment necessary. If you are unable to come in during these hours, but would like to talk to Mr. Hartman, call him at the Jackson Hotel and make arrangements for a private interview in your own home.

If you are suffering from defective hearing, or if the hearing aid you now own isn't giving you the satisfaction you think it should, Mr. Hartman would like very much to talk to you. The few moments you spend with him may be the means of proving to yourself, that to hear again is to live again. So be sure and take advantage of this wonderful opportunity to consult with Mr. Hartman, and obtain your free copy of the booklet, "Hear Again." Paid Adv.
