Peace and World Service Topics for Guild Session

"Peace cannot be won once and for all, but must be won over and over again as our concepts change," said Mrs. J. W. Bunch, Forest Grove, in speaking for the annual weekend meeting of the Eugene district, Wesleyan Service guilds, Saturday evening at First Methodist church here.

Mrs. Bunch's topic, "Lasting Peace," was keyed to the meeting theme which was "The World to Serve." The speaker, who is national spiritual life education chairman for Wesleyan guilds, said that the concept of peace must change as the thinking of nations change.

"Peace must be in our hearts," Mrs. Bunch declared. "We must get away from belligerent thinking. We are world citizens whether we like it or not, and our thinking along this line must be changed."

Mrs. Bunch emphasized that individuals "can do something about peace." Enlarging on this Mrs. Bunch said the "world must be fed and clothed" and added that there "will be no peace while some have so much and others so little." She pointed out that "we are the favored few" and urged her listeners to do everything possible to see that the standards of living in the underprivileged countries are raised.

Mrs. Bunch spoke often of her trips to visit the United Nations, praised its work and said the UN provides a place "where for the first time in history men can sit around a table and talk over their problems." She urged her listeners to be optimistic about UN and to "give it a chance."

She told how a United Nations official, speaking to a large group of American women, had said, "If any of you belong to missionary groups, go home and work as you have never worked before." She added that areas in the world where Christian missionary work has been done stand out like oases in the desert and that in these areas people are apt to be better fed and peaceful.

To work for peace women must become informed, think for themselves, give of their time, money and materials, Mrs. Bunch said. She said women should "help create public opinion by keeping their conversation on a Christian level" and not indulge in derogatory talk about those of other colors or races.

She closed by saying "one person in one small community can have a part in bringing world peace."

Also speaking at the dinner was Mrs. Paul Kitzmiller, Dallas, Ore., Oregon conference secretary for Wesleyan Service guild. Mrs. Kitzmiller compared the work of efficient and inefficient guilds and speaking of the meeting theme, "The World to Serve" said "we can choose how wide we want our world to be."

Mrs. Kitzmiller declared that the Wesleyan guilds offer the gainfully employed woman "spiritual enrichment" and an opportunity to serve the church. Also speaking briefly was Miss Deh Hua Hang, Chinese student from Singapore whose education at Willamette university is being provided by Oregon Wesleyan Service guild members. Miss Hang, music major, is the daughter of a Methodist minister in Singapore and plans to return to that city to teach music. A gift of $50 was voted by the Eugene district to start a fund to buy an organ for Miss Hang's work when she returns to Singapore.

Mrs. C. R. Adamson, Medford, presided over the banquet. Mrs. Adamson, secretary for the guild's Eugene district, was re-elected to that office during the weekend session. Also named were Mrs. Gladys Wiley, Roseburg, associate secretary and Mrs. Winifred Prouty, Springfield, recording secretary and treasurer.

An emblem ceremony in the church followed the banquet, and Miss Hang played a short organ recital. Mrs. Everett Faber, Central Point, western jurisdiction secretary, conducted the ceremony and participating were Miss Nan Wilcox, Springfield; Miss Margaret Markham, Eugene; Mrs. Faber, Miss Vida Scripser, Ashland, and Mrs. Mary Guy and Mrs. George Renaker, Medford.

Mrs. J. C. Kaylor, Ashland, sang for both the dinner and the emblem ceremony, accompanied by Mrs. Adamson. About 100 women attended the dinner. As the final event of the day, delegates visited Station KBESTV as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Faber.

Guild members attended a breakfast and round-table discussion at the Medford hotel Sunday morning at 8 a.m. Mrs. George Blinkhorn coordinated the discussion and taking part were Harriet Ehlert, Coos Bay; Joyce Pruitt, Roseburg; Mrs. Mark Morgan, Cottage Grove; Wilma Harrington, Ethel Redi, Ashland, Winifred Prouty, Springfield; Mrs. Leland Peart, Coquille; Mrs. D. R. Fullerton and Mrs. Markham, Eugene.

The group attended morning services at the First Methodist church, luncheon was served in the church and a business session with reports closed the meeting.

Miss Pat's Barn Topic of Article

A featured article in the February 10 issue of the Christian Science Monitor, entitled "Every One Steps Lively in Miss Pat's Barn," and written by Jeunesse Butler, Medford, describes the operation and background of Miss Pat's Dance studio, Jacksonville highway.

The story also tells of various activities in which Miss Pat, (Mrs. Clifford Aldrich) and Mr. Aldrich participate.

The couple came here several years ago and after operating a dance studio in Medford for several months they moved to the location on Jacksonville highway near Bybee corner. There they remodeled the second floor of a large barn into a modern dance studio.

Book of Money-Making Plans Published By McCall's Magazine for Clubwomen

Many practical answers to the perennial question asked by all organizations—how to raise extra money—are given in the new "Book of Money-Making Plans," just published by McCall's magazine. Prepared for McCall's by Mildred White Wells, former editor of the General Federation Clubwoman, this handy booklet gives examples of successful money-making projects, and tells how to plan and organize them.

Mrs. Wells points out that "the success of any money-making project depends upon a wise choice of project, the booklet suggests preparation, supported by wholehearted cooperation from the membership." Emphasizing the importance of making a wise choice of project, the booklet suggests five main factors to consider before making a decision—the amount of money needed, the size of the community, the type of audience, available facilities (proper locale, equipment, personnel, etc.) and capacity of the membership. The booklet also outlines the basic pattern of organization to follow in developing a project—with suggestions for delegating authority, and coordinating the various activities.

All of the basic types of money-making projects are described in detail in McCall's new booklet—permanent projects, annual projects, occasional projects of specialized interest, and membership projects. The examples given for each type are projects which have been carried out successfully by various women's clubs throughout the country. Also included is a chart of money-making suggestions, compiled from a pamphlet by Mrs. Arnold L. Kaling of the State College Chapter, Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs.
