

Motor Vehicle Division Bill Brings Cries of 'Politics' From Democrats

Sweetland Raps Proposed Measure As 'Piracy' Act

Salem — (U.P.) — A fight to take the motor vehicle division out of the secretary of state's jurisdiction and make it a separate department under the appointive power of the governor reached the floor of the Senate today amid the Democrats' cry of "politics."

Sen. Monroe Sweetland, Milwaukie Democrat, called the measure, Senate Bill 53, "an act of political piracy." He said the "stripping" down of the main functions of the secretary of state's office is being done by the Republicans "with the expectation that a Democratic secretary of state will be elected in 1956."

Sheriff Terry Schrank of Multnomah county has been prominently mentioned as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for secretary of state.

Revenue Department Eyed

The bill was drawn on recommendation of an interim committee that studied a proposed Department of Revenue, which would embrace all revenue functions. The transfer of the Motor Vehicle Department was recommended as a first step in eventual establishment of a Department of Revenue.

The House had another politically hot fight on its hands as members took final action on a Senate-approved measure to remove the ban against putting the emergency clause on revenue measures.

Democrats opposed to the sales tax saw the measure, a resolution that would be referred to the voters, as a device to put a sales tax into effect and require the people to live with it at least a year before they could initiate a move against the tax. A sales tax has been turned down by Oregon voters five times.

Proponents are frank to say the sales tax is one thing they have in mind, but they believe if the people saw how it worked for a year, they would accept it.

Work on Final Details

The House Taxation Committee went to work this week on final details of the program it will present to the Legislature to finance the cost of state government for the next biennium and close the gap of an expected $55,000,000 deficit.

Not all teen-agers favor the proposal to lower the voting age from 21 to 18, as the senate judiciary committee learned Saturday.

A hearing on a resolution to extend the vote to 18-year-olds found some teenagers for and some against. The resolution was introduced by Sen. Mark Hatfield, Salem Republican.

Barbara Mahoney, 16, of Hermiston high school, said that many 18-year-olds are married, working and paying taxes. She said they have this taxation without representation when they don't have the right to vote.

Dave Barrows, 19, Willamette University sophomore from Berkeley, Calif., said the right to vote should be coupled with other rights of citizenship including the rights to serve on juries and sign contracts, which they do not have. He said "we teenagers are too much moved by our emotions rather than by judgment."

Should the Legislature adopt the resolution it would have to be referred to the voters as it involves the constitution.

McKay To Withhold Final Approval on O&C Road Plan

Portland — (U.P.) — A Western Forest Industrial association spokesman said that Interior Secretary Douglas McKay has agreed to withhold final approval of proposed revisions in O&C road regulations pending a U.S. Senate investigation.

Leonard Netzorg, WFA attorney, announced that Sen. James W. Murray (D-Mont.) had notified him of McKay's decision. Murray told Netzorg that the latest controversy over O&C right-of-way roads had been assigned to the Interior subcommittee on Public Lands.

Murray said staff attorney William H. Coburn had been assigned to the subcommittee for research and investigation.

Vincent Hallinan Plans Increased Political Activity

San Francisco — (U.P.) — Vincent W. Hallinan, Independent Progressive party candidate for president in 1952 has promised to "redouble" his political activities now that he is out of prison.

The millionaire San Francisco lawyer arrived here yesterday after serving 14 months of an 18 month sentence at McNeil Island, Wash., federal prison for income tax evasion.

He had served six months in the same prison in 1952 for contempt of court while defending Harry Bridges during the longshore leader's deportation trial.

Met by Wife, Sons Hallinan's pretty wife, Vivian, and their six sons met him at the airport, along with 40 or 50 well wishers.

Looking drawn, thin and pale after his confinement, the 58-year-old lawyer insisted that his prison term "didn't bother me a bit."

"And I'm not afraid of going back," he said. "Nothing will stop me from continuing to fight for liberal causes."

Privilege and Honor Asserting that "some of the best people" are being sent to jail now, Hallinan said it was "a privilege and an honor to be one of them."

Hallinan also said he will fight attempts now under way to disbar him. The Bar association has set a date for a hearing on June 6.

Referring to prison life, Hallinan complained that he was put to "sorting nuts and bolts. I'm an expert now."

American Farming Rapidly Becoming More of Business

Eau Claire, Wis. — (U.P.) — American farming is rapidly becoming more of a business and less a way of life.

That's one of the many changes seen in the nation's future agricultural setup by L. G. Monthey, secretary of the American Society of Agronomy. Twenty years from now, said Monthey, the average farmer will be a genuine business executive with his hands full of management problems and little of his own labor figuring in his production.

Monthey, who edits Crops and Soils at Madison, Wis., also predicted that the farmer of 1975 will own a larger farm because there will be 25,000 fewer units than the 168,600 of 1950.

He told delegates to the recent 17th annual meeting of the Wisconsin Insurance Agency cooperative here that modern production methods are causing sweeping farm changes.

Fewer Farms Although farming is still an important segment of America's economy, Monthey said, "it is falling behind other industries in terms of gross income, number of people engaged, and personal income of workers."

Only 15 per cent of the total national population now lives on operating farms, and that figure undoubtedly will be smaller by 1975, he pointed out.

Since agriculture plays such an important role in the nation's economic life, added Monthey, this narrowing process will place greater responsibility on the persons who remain in farming.

"One of the biggest problems facing agriculture today," he continued, "is that of working more closely with young people, helping young farmers assume their future responsibilities."

The Navy consumed 1,750,000,000 pounds of food last year, enough to fill a freight train reaching from Newport, R. I., to Baltimore, Md.

The Navy's carriers are mobile bases capable of moving aircraft into striking distance of vast areas formerly inaccessible.
