As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

Teenager's Foresight Understandably Weak

Parents, who have lived longer and have had more varied experiences than their teenage children, often cannot understand the teenager's lack of foresight.

(Q) "My son is 16 years old and could be a good student if he would only apply himself. But everything seems to come before his work. He likes athletics and plays on several of the high school teams. He is also in the glee club and chairman of the school party committee for his class. He allows all of these things to come before his studies."

"For example, just the other night he had a committee meeting for the spring dance. The next day he had a math test for which he had done little in the way of preparation. The meeting lasted until after nine, the boys stopped off on the way home to get something to eat, and it was ten o'clock before he started to study. I asked him the next day, how the test went and he said, 'Not so hot.'

"I have tried time and again to make him see that his lessons should come first if he wants to make a success in life, but I am making no headway. Have you any suggestions on how I can drive this home to him?"

(A) Try being more specific in your attempts to convince him of the importance of doing good enough work to prepare himself for his life career. You know, from adult experience, how important education is.

Your son, 16, cannot be expected to have the perspective you have.

Then, help him use a bit more foresight in planning his time. As chairman of the committee, he did not have to call a meeting the night before a test. Or, if it happened that the test was assigned after arrangements had been made for the meeting, he could have done some studying ahead.

Another suggestion is to encourage him to concentrate instead of trying to do so many things. It is fine to be in all sorts of activities in school if one has time for them. Your son obviously hasn't time if his studies are suffering. Urge him to concentrate on the activities he enjoys most and which have the greatest prestige value among his classmates. Then, he should give up the others.

Youthful Escapee Captured by Police

Portland — (U.P.) — A youthful escapee from the Salem city jail was captured by Portland and Oswego police here yesterday after a 100-mile-an-hour chase.

The escapee, Wendell Franklin Holder, 18, was surrounded by police and recaptured after the car he was driving was forced to a halt in railroad yards at the foot of NW 4th ave.

The chase began when Patrolman S. Starr Thurston, of Oswego, after hearing details of the escape on an all-points bulletin, staked himself out on the Salem-Portland expressway.

When he saw the car streak by on the way north, Thurston gave chase and radioed ahead to Portland police. Two patrol cars joined the pursuit and the procession, punctuated by gunfire, screamed through city streets.

Houseboat Dwellers Make Plans To Move

Portland — (U.P.) — Houseboat dwellers at Aviation Moorage on the Willamette river here have decided to obey a supreme court order and have made plans to move to a new site on the Columbia slough near Jantzen Beach.

Ben F. Forbes, Portland attorney acting for the 25 boat owners, said the Port of Portland has given his clients an additional 30 days in which to move. Deadline originally was Friday.

The houseboats three years ago were termed "menaces to navigation" by the Port. The decision went ultimately to the State Supreme Court, which upheld the port's ruling.

Houseboat owners several weeks ago said they would defy the order, but recently announced they had formed a cooperative to purchase a new moorage site.

Small Television Set Installed in Auto

Clinto, Ia. — (U.P.) — Charles Turner can have television wherever he goes.

Turner installed a seven-inch television set in the rear of his car, complete with speaker, rabbit-ears antenna and dashboard controls. Viewing from the front is done with mirrors.

He said two six-volt heavy-duty batteries supply the power and need re-charging once a month. He doesn't use the set while driving, but "it's great when waiting for an outdoor movie, drive-in restaurant service or when caught in a traffic jam."

Bills in Legislature

Salem — (U.P.) — The tabling of a measure to provide a start on the new mental hospital in Portland, does not mean it is a dead issue, according to Sen. John P. Hounsell (R-Hood River).

Sen. Hounsell, chairman of the ways and means subcommittee on buildings, said appropriations for the hospital will be considered along with other building proposals by his committee.

The Hood River senator said his statement had the approval of Senate President Elmo E. Smith (R-John Day) and Sen. Howard Belton (R-Canby), chairman of the Senate Ways and Means committee.

The committee had tabled House Bill 6, sponsored by Rep. F. H. Dammasch (R-Portland), an appropriation bill provided $3,000,000 for the hospital only.

pay a real property tax on enterprises not related to their religious or charitable activities. Rep. Pat Dooley (D-Portland) said the taxation committee felt that if one type of property were taxable, the other type should not be exempt.

Rep. Wayne Giesy (R-Monroe) opposed the bill because he said he feared it would hamper the benevolent activities of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which operates a farm at Troutdale to benefit its welfare program.

Also approved by the House was a memorial to Congress and the president urging that the lake behind McNary dam be named Aldrich lake in honor of the late E. B. Aldrich, Pendleton publisher.

Salem — (U.P.) — A measure to allow certain state agencies to use cars not bearing the state seal on each side has been passed by the Senate and sent to the House.

If enacted into law, the measure would leave it up to the director of the Department of Finance and Administration as to which cars should be exempt.

Yankees Barbarians When It Comes To Eating Fried Eggs, British Chef Says

London — (U.P.) — Charles Forsythe, the first man to note that Americans eat pie backwards, is now saying the yanks are barbarians when it comes to polishing off fried eggs.

The attitude across the Atlantic he says, seems to be that eating fried eggs takes no talent and very little time.

"They wouldn't be so offhand about breast of guinea hen sous cloche," he said bitterly. "I'm afraid that lack of technique about fried eggs is giving your tourists a bad name with dishwashers."

Forsythe, who made the strange transition from singing vaudeville headliner in America to distinguished chef in Britain, then put before me a dish of two fried eggs on a slab of york ham and disappeared.

"I couldn't bear to see it," he explained in the kitchen where he was later tracked down.

"I know exactly what you did. You stabbed those innocent yolks and let their yellow life-blood ooze out all over the plate. Then, because of your American fastidiousness, you did not sop it up with bread. You let half the yolk stick to the dish where it will cake and harden."

Forsythe said it reminded him of the days when he was headlining at the Palace in New York and noticed the way Americans ate pie.

"They ate, and some probably still do, from the thin triangle of the wedge down to the base of the pyramid or crust," he said. "By the time they reached the crust they weren't hungry any more and it went to waste."

How To Eat Eggs

"I converted lots of them to eating pie the right way, namely the crust first, which goes down easily when you are hungry, and working towards the thin end, which is the tastiest."

quickly nibbled away at the whites until the yolks were isolated, defenseless.

He slid the fork under the yolk, balanced it carefully and hoisted the whole yolk into his mouth. He rolled his eyes in ecstasy as the second one disappeared.

He held up his plate. Clean!
