Pictorial Program Helps Make Oregon Open Tourney Successful

One of the highlights this year of the Oregon Open Golf tournament, but important in making it a success, has been the publication of a pictorial program by the host Rogue Valley.

In addition to containing details concerning the tournament, the program publicizes southern Oregon in particular and Oregon in general with its variety of pictures. And proceeds from advertising in the publication have provided finances for the tourney.

Most striking and colorful feature of the program is its cover. The front of the booklet shows, in full color, Hayes falls, three miles upriver from Gold Hill. Fisherman in the scene is Dale Vincent, writer-artist-photographer, who resides on Old Stage road. The shot was taken by his wife in the fall of 1946 and appeared in his story, "Valley of the Rogue" in Pacific Pathways magazine that same year. Since then the photo has appeared on menus in numerous restaurants on the Pacific coast.

On the back, drawn in cartoon style by Bill McCorkle, is a map or layout of the Rogue Valley links.

Pictures inside the 52 page book are of southern Oregon lakes, streams and others recreational spots. There are photos of industry and agriculture of southern Oregon landscapes. The Oregon capitol building, Southern Oregon college, the Medford airport and the coast are shown.

Some of the pro and amateur participants in the tourney are pictured and there is a history of the Oregon Open written by George Bertz.

The tourney started today and concludes on Sunday.
