This is Year for White Collar Girl

New York (U.P.)—This is the year of white collar girls.

White collars, many of them moderate in size but most of them large, show on dresses, suits and coats.

To keep them white and crisp means a little work, but it's worth it. White collars and cuffs should be washed after each wearing. Since makeup and hair oil often soil the neckline, brush soapsuds along the edges during the washing. Or use an ordinary comb as a miniature washboard to "scrub" fine fabric edges.

Before washing a double collar which needs ironing, run long basting threads ½ inch in from the outer seam. After the collar has been washed, rinsed and pressed lightly, remove the basting and give it a final firm ironing.

Press pebble - weave piques on a thick towel to preserve the pebbly texture. Press lace or eyelet embroidery collars with a towel underneath and a cloth on top—the latter to protect open work from being snagged by the iron toe.

Surprise tip: a very little granulated sugar in the last rinse will "starch" a small, sheer white bow or collar. Use cold-water starch to crisp heavier collars.

Medford, Ashland and Central Point.

The institution will be a closed ceremony but parents and guardians of bethels and all members and persons with proper Masonic affiliations are invited. The public is invited to the installation, set for 9 p.m.
