

Hell's Canyon Bill Challenge Hurdled By Sen. Wayne Morse

The Dalles — (U.P.) — Sen. Wayne Morse, Oregon Democrat, last night challenged Gov. Paul L. Patterson and Oregon Republicans to take a stand on his controversial Hell's Canyon bill. Morse's bill calls for construction of a high federal multipurpose dam across the Snake river on the Oregon-Idaho border, rather than the three low dams proposed by the Idaho Power company.

Before a crowd of 500 in The Dalles High school auditorium Morse called on Gov. Patterson to decide "whether you are for it or against it."

Morse said the Republicans would be responsible if his Hell's Canyon bill failed to pass. Twenty-eight Democrats and two Republicans signed the bill and other Democrats including Sen. Alben Barkley have indicated their support.

County Sanitarian Advises X-Rays For Food Handlers

Employers and employees of the food service industry are urged by Orie Moore, county sanitarian, to have chest x-rays this week at the county's two permanent chest x-ray centers. The Community hospital center is open for public x-rays tomorrow from 2 to 6 p.m. and the newly-established Sacred Heart center Thursday from 2 to 5 p.m., according to a spokesman for the Jackson County Public Health association, which installed the x-rays in cooperation with the hospitals and other groups.

To Protect Customers

Although there is no Oregon law requiring physical examinations of those associated with the food industry, Moore said such workers should take advantage of the x-rays to protect their customers. There are regulations, however, forbidding anyone with a communicable disease from working in the food distributing industry.

Any person desiring a chest x-ray may call at either center during out-patient hours without appointment. A charge of $1.75 is made to cover the actual cost of the film, it was said.
