Helser Firm Faces Charges

San Francisco — (U.P.) — The Securities and Exchange Commission resumed its attempt today to obtain an injunction against what it called "fraudulent and misleading practices" by the Henry J. Helser Investment Company of Portland, Ore., and San Francisco.

Franklin E. Kennamer Jr., attorney for the SEC, opened the case yesterday in federal court with a request that Judge Louis E. Goodman "curb the gross misrepresentation that heretofore has characterized the conduct of the Helser Company."

The SEC charged that the Helser firm used little or no discrimination in dealing with "highly speculative and volatile stocks."

The stocks were represented to the company's 6,000 clients as solid investments, the SEC said, with no regard to their protection. Two witnesses for the government, Mrs. Gertrude Darling of San Jacinto, and Mrs. Clara E. Hall of Tacoma, testified yesterday they had accounts with Helser.
