

BOWED BY GRIEF—Robert Yohn bows his head over the body of his young son, Jimmy, 3, after the youngster was struck and killed by passing car in Buffalo, N. Y. Jimmy, following his father to the store, raced into street from between parked cars and was hit by an auto driven by Harry W. Keck, 57. Keck said he never saw the boy.

A Nichol's Worth of . . . Comment On This and That

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Feature Writer

Washington — (U.P.) — The dollar watch us old coots once sported in the bib-pocket of our overalls still is on the market. Only now it costs $2.95 for the white face, and $3.95 for a black face.

The Ingersoll every old timer remembers has been revived, and Harman Nichols you can not blame the up in price entirely on rising costs. The 1955 model, on display at the American Watch and Clock markets exhibit here in the Department of Commerce building, has something added. A sweep second hand.

The modern version, according to the United States Time Corp. of Waterbury, Conn., has 100 separate parts made in nearly 2000 operations. Before the watch goes into your watch pocket, some 3000 inspections are made.

Salesman Ingersoll

As a matter of fact, Robert Ingersoll never made a watch in his life. He had the idea and the Waterbury folks made his watches and put his name on them. Robert did the selling.

In the old days a worker got 60 cents an hour for making a watch. The old time piece was billed as the "watch that made the dollar famous." We don't have a three or four-dollar bill today, so the slogan has been discarded.

One of the attractions of the exhibit by the watch and clock makers is Princess Little Thunder of the Chippewa Indian tribe of North Dakota. The princess, one of eight children, lives on a reservation near Rolla, N. D. When she arrived here, she was leaving her home locality for the first time. The 5-foot, dark-eyed Indian beauty is one of the precision workers at a jewel bearing plant in Rolla.

"It is easy work," Princess Little Thunder said. "After you work with the jewels for a while, you don't have to use a microscope or magnifying glass. Doing what you have to do comes instinctively. And if you watch what you are doing, you don't make many mistakes."

At the Turtle Mountain Ordnance plant, operated by the Bulova people, who do it for Uncle Sam for $1 a year, the princess works with a jewel bearing made of synthetic ruby. It has a diameter of 0.0394, near three ten-thousandths of an inch.

The hole she must make with a high carbon, tungsten steel drill has a diameter of 0.000177 inches.

Bills in Legislature

Salem — (U.P.)—Rep. Walter Pearson (D-Portland) has suggested that the legislature "take the bull by the horns" and set up a special election to allow the people to decide on either a sales tax or a universal income tax.

Pearson, a member of the House Tax Committee, said the election would provide alternatives if the present "stop gap" proposals are referred.

Rep. Loran Stewart (R-Cottage Grove), committee chairman, admitted the income tax increase passed by the House was a "stop gap" proposal, and that additional sources of income would have to be found in two years.

The Oregon Tax Commission estimated the needs for the 1957-59 biennium would be $230,000,000, or a $37,800,000 increase over the 1955-57 needs for which revenues would have to be found.

The commission said a three per cent sales tax, from which food was exempt, would raise $90,000,000.

No action was taken by the committee.

Salem — (U.P.)—A substitute bill relating to taxes against water transportation companies has been introduced by the House Taxation Committee to exempt property of firms engaged in high seas traffic.

The substitute bill was introduced to meet the objections of the port of The Dalles and other Columbia river shipping points who feared the state's present tax structure for barge and boat lines would drive such business out of the state.

Salem — (U.P.)—The House and Senate joint Ways and Means Committee has turned down a proposed $130,000 budget for the Oregon Development Commission.

The vote was 7-7, meaning the budget failed to win the necessary majority.

Defeat of the development commission's budget spelled an end to the two-year-old agency, which was formed to attract new industry to Oregon.
