Ingenuity Solves Many Problems For Homemakers

New York — (U.P.)—The homemaker's best friend is her own ingenuity.

Give her a housekeeping problem and she will solve it, often with an unorthodox method but always with a workable one.

This a Jackson, Miss., cleanser manufacturing company found when it recently started a "Mrs. Homemakers' Forum" for exchange of ideas.

The first week, 3,000 letters poured into its New York and Mississippi offices. The total now is above 30,000, according to the company. The helpful hints range from how to keep ants out of the kitchen to making show shoveling easier.

Take for instance the one offered by Mrs. Phyllis Anides of the Bronx, N. Y. She found that the bottom of many of her double boilers burned out. She solved the problem by placing two or three marbles in the lower pot. When the water gets low, the clanging of the marbles warns her.

Mrs. Florence Raleigh of Monticello, Mo., wrote that when scissors become dull, she sharpens them by cutting a few strips of sandpaper.

Mrs. Etta Rosenbluth of New York said she got tired of hearing her husband complain he couldn't fall asleep with a clock ticking in the bedroom. She places a glass tumbler or bowl over the clock, reducing the sound of the ticking but leaving the clock visible.

If the way stair carpeting wears is worrying you, Mrs. Byron L. Taylor of Minneapolis has a remedy.

"When buying new stair carpet, order an extra yard," she suggested. "In laying it, fold the extra length under, half at the top of the stairs, half at the foot. Later, when the carpet begins to show wear at the edges of the treads, shift the whole thing upward. When it shows wear again, shift downward."

To make snow shoveling easier for her husband, Mrs. Caroline Feldmann of Chicago coats the shovel with paraffin. Snow

Children will be dismissed at the usual time to enable them to catch the buses. Business meeting will follow the program. Refreshments will be served by seventh grade parents.

A good citizen award was presented to Mildred Gail, a senior at Crater high school and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gail, at an afternoon tea, by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Awards were presented to six other girls from the various high schools in the county.

Mrs. Paul Throne and brother Kenneth Arnold have returned from a few days trip to Stockton, Calif., where they visited their mother, Mrs. Charles Arnold, who is in the process of moving to Long Beach to make her home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kruse of the Antique shop on Highway 99N have returned from Eugene where they attended a two day antique show. They brought back some interesting antiques for their shop.

Ashland — Final enrollment figures for the spring quarter at Southern Oregon college have been released by Registrar Mabel W. Winston and reflect an increase of 9.6 per cent over a comparable period last year.

Total term enrollment is 661, Mrs. Winston said, with the greater increases occurring in the general studies and lower division program of the college. Teacher education enrollment was also up slightly.

slides off instead of sticking, she said.

Mrs. Blanche Maskiewicz of Fitchburg, Mass., likes this method to crush crackers or bread for crumbs. She puts them in a plastic bag, then runs a rolling pin over the bag.

MEDFORD (OREGON) MAIL TRIBUNE—NINE

This summer the well-dressed businessman won't have to suffer in the summer heat. He can be both comfortable and well-dressed in the new cotton suits that are due for popularity in menswear fashions. This young executive wears a grey business suit by Gordon of Philadelphia in Reeves Facility cotton cord, a style that features the "natural" look. His Superba plaid tie is in M. & W. Thomas cotton.

Cool Cotton Suit To Be Fashionable For Men This Year

The cool, "cotton look" will be a major style note in summer suits for men, according to fashion experts.

The cotton suit is headed for a strong revival because of the advent of wrinkle-resistant finishes and new types of fabric.

A worsted-type cotton suiting and chino striped twill are new entries in the men's summer suit field. Cotton poplin suits and cotton gabardines, introduced within the past year or so, already are popular in some areas. The traditional cords and seersuckers also are expected to receive a welcome from men who are seeking clothing comfort for

Lonely Fireplaces

Minneapolis—(U.P.)—The following want ad appeared in a Minneapolis newspaper: "Room-mate wanted — Girl to share apartment with two fire places."

Treated for crease-resistance, hot summer days.

The trend to cotton in summer suits is an outgrowth of the longer menswear trend toward greater comfort, lighter weight, more color and simpler styling. The emphasis on casual comfort already has brought about a strong upsurge of cotton in men's sportswear. Cotton is a favorite this year in sport shirts, odd jackets, and beachwear. Vivid colors, influenced by Continental styling, will be fashion trend in cotton sportswear this year.
