As We Live

Father, 65, Insists On Doing Heavy Work

Few people are willing to admit that they are able to do less than they once could.

(Q) "My father, who is nearly 65, came to live with us last winter, after my mother died."

He is retired and has a small pension so that he is able to do most of the things he wants to. He also has some money he saved and will have a fairly good retirement fund from an old age policy when he reaches 65. He pays me for his board and lodgings, and this helps, as we have no more than we need.

"My problem is that my father insists upon doing all kinds of things that I feel he shouldn't do. For example, every time we had a snowstorm this winter he insisted upon shoveling snow. I tell him he is too old to do such heavy work, but he insists that he is in fine health and never has anything wrong with him. I am so afraid he will have a stroke or something like that if he isn't more careful, but I simply can't make him see how foolish it is to take such a chance. What would you advise?"

(A) First and foremost, stop pointing out to your father that he is getting too old to do the things he has been accustomed to do. It hurts his pride to have you or anyone else remind him of his age.

He will do the very things you are trying to keep him from doing just to prove that he is not "old."

Of course a man of his age should not be doing such heavy work. Even if he is in the best of health, it is a big risk and one not worth taking.

Undoubtedly he does not want to feel that he is making extra work for you even though he is paying you well. But there are many things he could do that would not impair his health and yet be very useful to you.

Why not ask him to do some errands that would give him a chance to walk in the open and to see people? Or, he could help with some of the lighter work in the home, such as preparing vegetables or doing some of the cooking, if he likes to cook.

Loretta Young Will Be In Bed Several Days

Oxnard, Calif. — (U.P.) — Doctors at St. John's hospital here said today actress Loretta Young would be hospitalized for several days as the result of what at first appeared to be an appendicitis attack.

Your Health and Its Care

A GOOD RISK FOR THE JOB

Was it Anthony Trollope who proposed euthanasia for persons approaching seventy? Wasn't it

Dr. Brady

Trollope's proposal that Doctor Osler cited humorously in an address to the graduating class at Johns Hopkins and the news bureau sent round the world as Osler's own recommendation? Trollope never made it. He shoved off at 67. Osler did a little better; he conked out at a respectable 70.

Old-timers may remember that the conductor of this perennial column advocated compulsory retirement from work, profession, or business at 64. Looking back, I think now that if my plan had been accepted—voluntary retirement at 60, compulsory retirement at 64, with a pension computed at half the individual's annual income or earnings since the age of 40—I could have done a lot more bowling in recent years.

Perhaps my opinion about the time to retire was biased by what I found when I examined the candidates for the presidency in the course of the 1920 campaign. On the one hand the Governor, who cheerfully went through every test I wished to make, said I might write what I pleased about his condition. But maybe he knew he was in excellent health. On the other hand the Senator wouldn't submit to any kind of examination unless and until I gave him my word not to reveal to the public what I might find. . . . I kept my word. Privately I predicted that if elected he would not live out his term.

Ever since I have pondered the question: Why do we entrust the fate of our country to a man or men whose capacity to bear the burden we do not know or care to know? Think of this when you think of Teapot Dome and Yalta.

In the armed services officers must pass a physical examination to qualify for promotion or even to remain on active duty. But nobody cares whether the Commander-in-Chief is capable of doing his job, just so long as the politicians like him. In Yankeland, we are inspired by patriotism July 4, Feb. 22, Nov. 11 and maybe other days in different sections of the country, but the rest of the time we serve party politics.

As Osler observed in "the doctor's bible," a man of 28 or 29 may have the arteries of a man of sixty, and a man of forty may present vessels as much degenerated (physical degeneration, cardiovascular degeneration, C.V.D., arteriosclerosis, hardening of the arteries) as they should be at eighty.

So a person's chronological age is not important. What we should know is whether the individual is anatomically and physiologically capable of fulfilling the requirements of the office to which we purpose to elect him.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Garlic Hokus
Has garlic remedial value for high blood pressure? Neighbor presented me with a bottle of garlic tablets and said they were good for anything that might ail one. . . . (Miss H. M.)

Answer—No.
Stage Fright
I have to give a talk before an audience early in May. I'm a high school student, and whenever I have to give such a talk I become so nervous I forget all of what I want to say. At no other time do my nerves bother me. . . . (R. H.)

Answer—Send stamped, self-addressed envelope and ask for pamphlet STAGE FRIGHT AND EXAMINATION JITTERS. Many sufferers report that the preventive treatment given in the pamphlet enabled them to keep as calm as a cat at a rathole.

Bow Legs
I am twenty years old. Never had bow legs until three years ago. They seem to be getting more bowed. I am 61 inches tall and weigh 95 pounds. . . . a patent appliance that gradually straightens them. (G. R.)

Answer—The patent appliance is worthless. Only operation on the bones will straighten them. Now let's see in a person over six years of age. I take it you're a girl. You are 15 or 20 pounds overweight. The flesh on your bones would make your legs look straighter. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for pamphlet HOW TO GAIN WEIGHT.

Home Inspections Offered by Marshal

City residents may have their homes inspected for fire hazards simply by requesting the city fire department for such inspection. Fire Marshal Truman Nelson informed the Medford Professional Insurance Agents association at a noon luncheon last week.

He stressed that persons who think they have hazards in their homes or who feel that they have installations which are not as safe as they should be are welcome to call the department.

Nelson also mentioned the annual inspection program which will begin on May 2 this year. Three trucks with three men each will cover the city on its east and west streets, stopping at each residence to see whether inspection is desired. The pro-east-west streets are covered. Homes on north-south streets were inspected last year.

The marshal also outlined the city fire permit policy.

The meeting was the regular monthly session of the insurance men and their discussion concerned a county fire insurance program.
