Concert Friday by Stephen Kemalyan Ends Season for Civic Music Members

By RICHARD WERNER
The final concert of the 1934-35 season of the Jackson County Civic Music association was given Friday evening by Stephen Kemalyan, baritone and his accompanist, Arthur Wilson. Mr. Kemalyan appeared here instead of Rawn Spearman, who was unable to fill his civic music contract because of an extended engagement in New York City where he is appearing in "House of Flowers."

Young Mr. Kemalyan presented a varied program, of some length, with a very beautiful voice, but he does not know how to sing.

To learn a repertoire of many songs in different languages is not the whole of the art of singing, contrary to the common belief. Because one is endowed with a beautiful voice does not make one a singer, and not a good one or a great one. It would be the same as saying that the owner of a Steinway grand piano or a Stradivarius or Guarnerius violin is a great pianist or great violinist.

To produce tones from a good or beautiful voice requires a knowledge along with much practicing, of breath control, coloring, placement and many other things that make the text of the music, clear, understandable and meaningful to the audience. Those things Mr. Kemalyan lacked. The basis of his breath is a large bellows capacity for he has a deep powerful chest very much like a robust tenor.

His diction was opaque simply because his voice never projected beyond his soft palate. Whether singing in English, Italian or French the words all sounded the same, vocal sounds with no meaning.

It could have been a rewarding musical evening. The program was excellently chosen and balanced, but the rendition was marred by a monotonous delivery. Mr. Wilson played his group very well but without any distinction. As an accompanist he was most excellent and sustained Mr. Kemalyan with sound musicianship and good taste.
