Neckties' Evening Gowns Worn Again in Soviet Zone

By JOSEPH FLEMING
United Press Correspondent
Berlin — (U.P.)—Neckties and evening gowns are coming back in the Soviet zone of Germany.

The ties may be striped or plain, loud or conservative, but they are becoming a must for the German man, particularly at parties or restaurants.

Evening gowns now have the Communists' blessing, too, so long as they do not reveal too much of the bust. But cocktail dresses still are frowned upon.

Girls who wear dresses emphasizing the bust are accused of trying to look like "American pin-up girls." And in the West, the Communists charge, girls don cocktail dresses just to get men to buy drinks for them.

The return of ties and evening gowns is part of a government campaign to convince East Germans that Communism and fashion go together.

For a long time East German Communists neglected their appearance and their manners.

The idea seemed to be to dress as badly as possible and as much like everyone else as possible.

Ties, even in the evening, were worn by men infrequently, and in government or Communist Party offices they were as rare as criticism of the Soviet Union.

But now the Communist press almost daily advises that ties and Marx are not incompatible.

Taking the hint, the government-operated Cafe Nord in East Berlin bars tieless customers. For those who still object to wearing ties on the street, the cafe lends them to guests at the clock room for a deposit of five marks ($1.25).

Women's pages and magazines, in the past completely devoted to politics, now carry fashion hints and models of evening gowns.

Even the Tagliche Rundschau, official Soviet High Commission newspaper, gave the H-line the Kremlin's blessing.

"The H-line must be evaluated as the sign of a new fashion that cancels out the American pin-up girl ideal," the Rundschau's women's page said.

Curb Food, Save Husband Says Harvard Nutritionist

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Correspondent
Hollywood Beach, Fla.—(U.P.)—

A famous nutritionist says that women are killing their husbands with culinary kindness.

Almost every woman takes pride in setting an abundant table and seeing her husband take second helpings. But Dr. Frederick J. Stare says that a woman runs less chance of being widowed if her pride suffers while hubby's waistline stays slim.

Stare, 44, chairman, department of nutrition, Harvard School of Public Health, said that contrary to popular belief this is not the healthiest nation in the world—particularly for men past 40.

Wives Outlive 'em Statistically, he said, in an interview during a recent food conference, the American male at 45 can look forward to fewer birthdays than his counterpart in several European countries—Norway, Denmark and Italy, to name three.

The Harvard nutritionist said that two of every three deaths of men past 40 are caused by heart or circulatory disease.

"Overweight is one reason why," he said. "In a way, our women are making widows of themselves . . . just by over-feeding their men."

The nutritionist said that a man of 50 in good health and of average weight has a good chance of living to nearly 70, the present life expectancy average of the male population.

"But if in the next year or two," he said, "he adds 25 pounds, he has cut five years off his life."

Woman's life span is longer, and strangely enough, Stare said, excess weight isn't as damaging to a woman's health in the 40's as it is to a man's.

"Her obesity catches up with her later," Stare said, "although medical science doesn't know why."

How To Keep Husband What can a woman do to keep from being widowed? "First, she will have to curb the urge to over-set the table and show off her cooking talent," said the nutritionist.

"Keep the gooey desserts, rich gravies, sauces and other calorie-laden foods out of hubby's sight. If she must 'create, let it be fast treatments of low-calorie dishes."

"Home-made chocolate cake is just too tempting for a man," Stare said with a laugh.

One way to keep hubby from gaining weight is to make the servings smaller.

"And curb the urge to insist on second helpings," Stare said. "When hubby says 'no, thank you,' don't insist."

Gadgets Help Grandma To Keep Young, Alert

Dallas, Tex. — (U.P.)—New gadgets enable grandma to grow old more gracefully, says Mrs. France Long of Atlanta, Ga., president of the National Federation of Grandmothers Clubs of America.

Mrs. Long was one of the honor guests at a two-day meeting of the Grandmothers Clubs of Texas.

"The new gadgets save wear and tear and leave grandma more alert for such things as attending lectures or musicals or meeting with friends," Mrs. Long said.

Here's How to Cook Bumper Crop of Rice

Chicago — (U.P.)—To cook rice snowy-white add a teaspoon of lemon juice or 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar to the cooking water, says Mrs. Barbara McGrath, nutrition specialist at the University of Illinois.

With last year's bumper crop of rice, estimated at about 6,000,000,000 pounds, now hitting the market, Mrs. McGrath recommended using it in place of many starch foods as a separate dish or in combination dishes with meats, chicken, fish or other protein-rich foods.

It also has a place in many tasty desserts, she added.

TV Stars Good Guide For Dress, Says Expert

Hollywood — (U.P.)—Television other TV stars, before embarking on shopping trips. Dinah Shore, he points out, is one of Hollywood's best dressed stars. Her show gowns always are a tip on good style. In the relaxation of home, a woman may sit and think about her clothes," he says. "She can study the fashionable stars she sees on the TV screen."
