

No Further Word On Salk Vaccine

Portland — (U.P.) — No further word has been received by the state board of health as to when the Salk polio vaccine will be available for state-wide use, it was announced today.

Inoculations were originally scheduled to start today, but were postponed at least one week pending the arrival of the vaccine. Dr. Harold Erickson, state health officer, said he had not yet received definite word when the vaccine will get here.

Dr. Hart Van Riper, medical director of the national foundation for infantile paralysis at New York, told Dr. Erickson there had been some depletion in supplies and also some delay to permit the National Institute of Health to complete checking the vaccine records.

Government Prefers To Dodge Big Words

Washington — (U.P.) — The government notified federal employees today it can do without such words as ameliorate, facilitate, advertency, precease and pecuniarily.

This attack on what is popularly known as "Gobbledygook" was issued in a booklet prepared by the General Services Administration working with the national archives.

The 44 page booklet tells federal employees how to write short letters. Don't, it told the workers, try to fool the taxpayers by fogging up the issues.

As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

WISHES DAUGHTER WERE CLOSER TO HER FAMILY

No two people are alike. One cannot expect even sisters to behave alike in a similar situation.

(Q) "I have two married daughters. The older daughter seems more wrapped up in her home and family than the younger. She never shows a real affection for me as my younger daughter did, and now she seems even less close to me than she was before she was married. My younger daughter, on the other hand, is more affectionate and spends more time with me. I would like to feel that we are one large, happy family but I cannot seem to make my older daughter want to share the family life as my younger daughter does. I have treated both girls alike all their lives so I cannot understand the difference in their behavior. Can you throw some light on this problem?"

(A) You may feel that you have treated both exactly alike, but I question whether you actually have. Because the younger daughter is more responsive, you have doubtless shown her more affection. The older daughter has probably resented this. When young women marry, it is natural and right for them to be mainly interested in their own homes and families. The woman who makes the greatest success of her marriage follows this pattern.

This, of course, does not mean that she should lose interest in her parental family. But if she is doing a good job of being a wife and mother she cannot give as much time to them as she did before she married.

If you want your older daughter to take her place as a member of a big happy, family group, you must let her know how much her presence means to all of you. Going on the assumption that she feels you prefer the younger daughter to her, you should bend over backwards to be loving to her, even if she is not too responsive.

Jealousy can and often does carry over to adult years. The younger daughter has come out with the lion's share of your time and affection up to now. Now it is time to make up for the past in the case of your older daughter.
