SCIENCE AT WORK

New York (U.P.)—Prof. Earl Parker Hanson, geographer and economist who devotes himself to the study of peoples, has made a discovery in Puerto Rico—the Puerto Rican people have been transforming themselves.

Since 1940, things have been going on which make the island people hard to recognize, even to an old Puerto Rico student such as himself. Formerly their energies largely were spent in increasing one of the highest birth rates in the western world.

Then things began happening, and since 1940 Puerto Rico has, in the professor's words: "Greatly extended its power network and launched a remarkable program of industrialization to give employment and to strengthen and diversify the economy."

"Made strong headway in the diversification, modernization and augmented production of its agricultural plant."

"More than doubled its per capita annual income in terms of purchasing power and made strides in the improved distribution of that income among all the island's people."

"Created one of the best public health services in the hemisphere and reduced its death rate to a figure comparable to that of the continental United States."

Astonishing Results
"Expanded its education system and taken drastic steps toward its reshaping to fit modern needs."

"Extended that great impetus to all classes of Puerto Ricans to the point where thousands are today 'civically employed' and are giving their thoughts and labor to the task of directly improving their lives instead of expecting their government to do everything for them."

"Created social and economic conditions under which its former 'explosive' birth rate has turned the corner and is rapidly declining, so bringing the society ever nearer the point where population will finally be in balance with the productive effort."

"Abolished its former colonial status and created new forms of political relationships under which it is today an 'independent' country within the framework of the United States, sharing the broader independence of the latter."

But the accepted learning of Dr. Hanson's science, all these accomplishments in such a short period are quite astonishing, and he makes no effort to avoid an astonished tone in his analytic book, "Transformation: The Story of Modern Puerto Rico."

Many Reasons
The reasons are many and some of them are complex, but he saw their solutions coming into a happy conjunction in 1940 when Puerto Rico elected its own governor for the first time. The island had had governors since Juan Ponce de Leon, but the first to govern by the suffrage of Puerto Ricans was Luis Munoz Marin and all he promised the people was "to guide them on the long, tortuous and sometimes perilous uphill road toward a decent life."

The professor, who is chairman of the geography and geology department of the University of Delaware, saw Puerto Rico as "America's answer to Communism."

As We Live

Distressed By Attempts To Prejudice Stepson
When a stepmother does all she can for her stepchild, relatives should be satisfied. If they are not, the stepmother is faced with a difficult problem.

"Two years ago, I married a widower with a son three years old. His wife died when the baby was born and the wife's parents took care of the baby. Since our marriage, I have been taking care of the boy and I love him as much as if he were my own child. Now, my problem is this. Once a week, he goes to spend a day with his mother's parents. When he comes home, he is very hard to manage and rather resentful toward me."

"He often says that 'Granny said this about you', which has led me to believe that his grandparents are trying to turn him against me. I always invite them to spend every holiday with us and often have them here for the day on Sunday. My husband feels that it is longer necessary to keep up the contact with the grandparents, as they seem to be trying to prejudice the boy against me but I hate to cut them off from their grandchild, especially as they came to the rescue when the child's mother died. What do you advise me to do?"

(A) I advise you to have a frank talk with the grandparents before you make a final decision about future action. It certainly would be unfair to break off the contact unless it is best for the boy.

Show them that you are trying to treat the boy as your own and that you do not want him to forget his own mother, even if he never actually knew her. Let them see how sincere you are in your efforts to be a real mother to him.

Then, if they persist in trying to prejudice the boy against you, you will have no alternative but to break off the relationship. It is not fair to the boy to make him dissatisfied with you and resentful toward your efforts to make a good home for him.

Of equal importance, it is unfair to you to make your job of being a mother to the boy a hard vide, Communism is by far the best way to divide it. During the past decade, the people and leaders of Puerto Rico have done such a tremendous job of improving their lives through planned economic development and social reform that both their Communists and their terrorists have been reduced to small, numerically insignificant groups which seem curiously old-fashioned in the current setting of seething, creative activity."
