

Mark Goldy Reports to Club On Attitudes in Asian Lands

In Hong Kong, the "listening post" between east and west, English people are surprised and displeased with American sponsorship of Chiang Kai-shek, according to Mark A. Goldy, Medford businessman just returned from an extensive trip through the orient. He spoke Tuesday for the Medford Rotary club at the Jackson hotel.

Englishmen, Chinese and people of all the lands he visited with Mrs. Goldy were friendly to the U. S., despite frequent disagreement with American foreign policies, Goldy said. The trade-minded English are concerned with the need for trade relations with Red China, he added.

Visits Clubs

Goldy described the numerous Rotary club which he visited during his tour. The most cosmopolitan clubs he attended were those of Singapore, with 22 nationalities in the membership, and the Bangkok, Thailand, club with 21 nationalities.

Four Rotary clubs in Hong Kong and the nearby club in Macao had among many civic projects the relief of refugees from Red China, pouring into their areas in great numbers, Goldy reported. Dr. Wang, former ambassador to the U. S., a vice-president of Rotary International and distinguished Chinese citizen, was the speaker at one of the meetings Goldy attended in Hong Kong.

Support Projects

Rotary clubs in the far east generally support community projects similar to U. S. clubs, among them the promotion of Boy Scout, YMCA schools for the blind, and others. In addition, several of the organizations aid in establishing the maintaining leprosy colonies.

Rotary program chairman Clifford Hanson introduced the speaker. The next meeting of the club will be the Inter-City Golden Anniversary meeting Wednesday evening at the Medford Elks club.

Is That So?

By Eugene Burns
Ranger-Naturalist

What size have birds attained? Many Indian tribes tell of a gigantic eagle-like bird, the thunderbird, which was the scourge of the western plains and was credited with being able to carry off humans and feed on bison which it killed.

But that famous story-teller, Marco Polo, reported a yet bigger bird, the rokh.

Marco Polo said it was large enough and strong enough to seize an elephant with its talons and lift it into the air where it let it fall to the ground to kill it and prey upon its carcass. In a latter version, in The Arabian Nights, the bird took Sinbad the Sailor for a ride.

For many years such bird tales have been scoffed at. Yet comparatively recently the remains of an enormous eagle-like bird have been discovered in California. The skull of this large bird (thunderbird?) is twice the size of the bald eagle's (which has a wing spread of seven-eight feet) and its other bones are proportionately large.

Egg Contained Two Gallons

As for Marco Polo's bird from Madagascar, skeletons and egg shells of a tremendous bird have been found. What's more, it lived until comparatively recently. Enough of the shells have been found to let us know that the egg would hold two gallons of yolk and egg white—its dimensions being 13 inches long by nine and a half wide. Judging from its bones, it may well have been over ten feet tall and extremely heavy. Its thigh bones, only a foot long, were a half foot thick.

Comparing these birds with today's living specimens, we have condors with a 10-11 foot wing-spread apparently considerably smaller than the thunderbird of legendary fame; and of the flightless birds, today's African ostrich is smaller. But the African ostrich need not apologize—some grow to weigh 300 pounds, stand at eight feet, take 25-foot long strides, and deliver a sidekick with force enough to break a man's leg.

It is doubtful however, if the thunderbird could have carried off a human; and as for the rokh, it couldn't have flown off with a mouse because like most island birds which have found a haven of plenty with no enemies and a good climate, it grew large and heavy and lost the power of flight.

Zellerbach Plans Plywood Plant

San Francisco—(U.P.)—Crown Zellerbach corporation announced today it will soon begin construction on a $750,000 green veneer mill in the Columbia river area near Portland, Ore.

When completed the new mill will be Zellerbach's first plywood production plant in the United States, a company spokesman said. The firm presently manufactures plywood at its subsidiary Canadian Western Lumber company near New Westminster, B.C.

"This will be our first step toward a full-fledged U.S. plywood operation running eventually into several million dollars," company president J. D. Zellerbach said.

"It is also a significant development toward further diversification of our operations with maximum utilization of our forest resources in the Pacific Northwest."

Construction will begin shortly, Zellerbach said, and mill operations are expected to start within six months of the time work on the plant is started.

Salk Using Funds For More Research

New York—(U.P.)—Contributions being sent to Dr. Jonas Salk in appreciation for his historic research on polio are being used to establish a fund for the financing of more research on preventive medicine, it was revealed last night.

Salk is turning the contributions over to the Jonas Salk fund which "very likely" will be used in the field of preventive medicine.

Establishment of the fund was disclosed by Edward R. Murrow on his "See It Now" television show on CBS "with the knowledge and consent of Dr. Salk." Murrow quoted Salk as saying he will "keep and cherish the spirit of the giving," but is accepting only temporarily, and in trust, "certain monies, all the way from a dollar up" that are being sent him from all parts of the country.

Murrow said Salk "does not solicit funds, but if the spirit moves you, communications and contributions can be sent to the Jonas Salk fund, care of the University of Pittsburgh."
