They'll Do It Every Time By Jimmy Hatlo

Youthful Fisherman Business Executive

Buffalo, N.Y. (U.P.) - The role of business executive came early to 11-year-old Michael J. Donohoe, an ardent fisherman.

As a hobby, the suburban six-grader began tying his own flies a few years ago. Then he sold some to a local sporting goods dealer. Before he realized what was happening, young Mike found himself president, general manager - and chief laborer - of the M. J. D. Company.

In February, Mike delivered his largest single order of flies, 60 dozen, to a chain department store here.

"It took me about two months, working a couple of hours each day, to finish the order," he said.

Mike hopes to expand his business by contacts with other local sporting goods stores. He now makes more than 50 different kinds of flies, but plans to concentrate on the more popular types such as the Yellow Sally and White Miller.

His best customer is his father, James Donohoe, a copilot for American Airlines.

"Mike and I do a lot of summer fishing together and we have nailed some big ones with his flies," Donohoe said.

Youngster Wins State Duck Calling Title

Memphis, Tenn. (U.P.) - Daryl Cates is only 12 but he's already a top duck caller, winning the state title.

Daryl, who started hunting when he was nine, said he can call crows as well as ducks, but he likes best being the champion duck caller.

"One of the nicest things about being the champion duck caller is that I get to miss school to give demonstrations, but not very often," he said.

Daryl got a brand new 12-gauge pump shotgun for winning the contest. One of those he beat out in the competition was his father, Frank L. Cates.

Three different calls come out of Daryl's caller - the "long distance," the "close in" and the "feeding call."

He won the contest with a caller he had borrowed from W. C. Newton, defending champion.

Daryl says people in his neighborhood don't object to his practicing, but that some who don't know what he's doing "sometimes look at me as though I were crazy."

The youngster also like to swim, fish and play football, but "most of all I like to hunt."

made a perfect approach of 150 yards to the green! Proflic Mothers. Ireland is a land of prolific mothers. An Irish woman who has only four offspring is considered practically childless. The most prolific mothers in Ireland are those of the County Fermanagh. As for example, Mrs. Mabel Murphy, who in thirty-two years of marriage, became the mother of twenty-eight children. Twenty-six single births and one pair of twins.

Seventy-five per cent of women marry the first man who asks them. Young widows get the most proposals of marriage. However, they are not inclined to accept the first one. They shop around a little. Such is the claim of a student of life among the married... What's the hardest kind of pie to make? Those who should know say it is lemon meringue. Most difficult cake to make properly is angel food cake.
