

PLAYING ROUGH—A picket attempting to stop car leaving the strike-bound Sperry Gyroscope plant at Lake Success, N. Y., lands on top of the hood after jumping on the moving vehicle. Police move in to quell demonstration. Eleven pickets were arrested on disorderly conduct. Strike was called by CIO International Union of Electrical Workers which represents 9500 Sperry employees. They are asking an 18-cent-an-hour increase.

Bills in Legislature

Salem—(U.P.)—A measure to establish county school boards with new powers is before the House after getting the approval of the Senate.

Under the proposal, directors would be elected from zones within a county and they in turn would hire the county school superintendent.

The new boards would supervise duties now handled by the superintendent, the district boundary board and budget board. The board would apportion the county school fund on an equalized basis. But the local school districts would continue to control their own budgets.

Salem—(U.P.)—The House has turned down a memorial asking Congress for a constitutional convention to place a limit on the taxing powers of the federal government.

Salem—(U.P.)—A bill increasing basic school support allocations for administration and operation has been passed by the House and sent to the Senate.

It would extend present limitations on the amount of school support money that the Board of Education may allocate for administration, operation and quality of teaching supervision from $150,000 to $200,000.

Salem—(U.P.)—The Senate discussed a measure to extend the capital mall area from Union street three blocks north to D street, then put the measure at the foot of the calendar which meant it would be the last matter up for discussion.

Salem Republican colleagues Sens. Mark Hatfield and Lee Ohmart were on opposite sides of the argument. Sen. Hatfield led the fight for the extension while Sen. Ohmart said there was no logical reason to tie up property that far north when it would not be used for at least 50 years if ever.

Traction Firm Loses Bid for Abandonment

Salem—(U.P.)—Public Utilities Commissioner Charles E. Heltzel has denied the Portland Traction Company's petition to abandon its Belrose and Oregon City interurban service.

Heltzel found the company had made no real effort to attract and encourage increased patronage aside from providing dependable service and buying some additional equipment.

Heltzel said that while passenger operations have been conducted at a loss each year, "the actual out-of-pocket losses are relatively low."

It was the second denial of a petition for abandonment. The first was in 1953.

Gordon Steele, president of the traction company, had no immediate comment.

New Trial Ordered For Convicted Reds

New York — (U.P.) — Federal Judge Edward J. Dimock has ordered a new trial for two of 13 convicted second string Communists leaders on the basis of turnabout witness Harvey Matusow's confession of perjury at their first trial.

Dimock denied new trials to the 11 others convicted at the same trial, however, saying Matusow's testimony "could not have given any support to the verdicts against the others."

A Nichol's Worth of . . . Comment On This and That

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Feature Writer

Washington—(U.P.)—Jim Beard makes a fat living by eating and he can prove it. He weighs 269 pounds, without the elephant blanket he wears for a sport coat.

"Want to know some thing about fancy cooking?" he said as he tested his tonnage on office chair.

I said I wasn't interested in any $15 meals. How about the poor man's lunch pail?"

"Well," he said ignoring the poor man, "if you can afford it and know how to cook, you ought to start off the day with some toast, half a dozen eggs, and maybe a hot hamburger and some cold steak and some tea. No milk, it's fattening. That menu should hold you until the first coffee break."

The fat man said if you want to hold down the midriff, for lunch you should starve yourself with half a sturgeon, a large platter of cheese and an egg dish and a large bowl of fruit.

Don't walk away from your bib hungry," Jim said. "You can have seconds, or the other half of the sturgeon."

"About the working man's lunch . . . ?" I asked.

"Then for dinner," he said, "it is smart to have a few steaks cooked in brandy. And maybe a couple or three baby chickens cooked with tarragon and white wine. This, you must remember, is a meal for two. And asparagus, cut in shreds and cooked for two minutes. Some cheeses and some (meaning a lot) of thin pancakes. And some bananas, which you bake in their hides and then peel and cook in cognac."

Jim was a good, and a fast talker, but I still was thinking about the working man.

For the Working Man

"Well," the fat lad said, "if you want to be plebian."

According to the well known expert and "consultant" on cooking who claims he was born in a kitchen, the lunch pail of the worker should contain:

A large portion of beef, potato, onions and salt and pepper. This should be baked by mama ahead of time and tucked into a couple of hunks of Cornish pastry.

"It's pretty good when cold," said the fat boy. "I've eaten it myself a couple of times when I was real hungry."

If the pail is big enough, the expert added, it also should contain some fruit and bread, and a thermos jug of coffee, tea or wine, and any leftovers from the ice box.

"I realize that doesn't sound like much," Jim said, "but a working man ought to take it easy at lunch time. He can let his belt out at the big meal at supper time."

Of the 37 units offered for sale 26 have merchantable timber. The remaining are classed as agricultural and crop land.

All the units have estimated appraisals which are not available as information to the bidders except when the bids have reached the appraised value and the sale has been approved.
