IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of John Landers, who passed away April 24, 1954. Beloved stepfather and grandfather of Mrs. E. Field and daughters, Diana and Donna Field.
Forgetfulness has not yet lured A heart his generous spirit stirred.
The warmth he gave to friendship's clasp,
Binds affections to the past,
And the faith he gave, has grown to be
A glowing gem in memory.
His good was planned, and finely sown,
When Heaven claimed him as its own.

Regional Forester Reports On 50 Years of Achievement In Management of Forests

J. Herbert Stone, Portland, regional U. S. forester, reviewed accomplishments of the forest service and loggers during the past 50 years at a joint meeting of the Siskiyou Chapter society of American Foresters and the Southern Oregon Conservation and Tree Farm association Friday night.

The meeting, which marked the 50th anniversary of the forest service, was attended by 145 foresters and loggers from Jackson and Josephine counties in Oregon, and Siskiyou county in California.

Stone, in saluting foresters and their contributions to forest protection, said that 50 years ago when the forest service was organized there were few people interested in forestry, and that there were no forests under management.

Today, Stone said, forest management not only helps in log cutting, but helps to provide roads to protect forests from fire. Good management now helps in conserving water and soil, as well as wildlife, Stone said.

"What is important," Stone said, "are the accomplishments over the past 50 years, not that the service is 50 years old." He added that the next 50 years of progress will be based on the previous half-century in development of conservation and providing recreational facilities for thousands of people.

Camping in 1905, Stone said, was limited to business, but today there are over 1,000 camping grounds in Southern Oregon. Many present recreational facilities such as camping sites, fishing lakes and streams, hiking trails, and winter sports areas are in national forests. Sanitary controls are necessary to keep forests clean because recreation areas are becoming overused and crowded, Stone said.

"We need a growing crop of foresters to carry on the need of management of forests. That is our responsibility," Stone said, and added that the service has "better trained men now who have a better background of Stone said that "50 years from now, people will notice a big change in the forest service."

Stone was introduced by Lewis L. Simpson, secretary-manager of the Southern Oregon Conservation and Tree Farm association. Among other guests were E. L. M. Stevenson, president of Southern Oregon college at Ashland; Ted Maul, district warden of the state forestry department; and E. K. Peterson, bureau of land management, Medford.

Retired forest service men were special guests at the banquet. They included John Henshaw, Roland Smith, Karl Janouch, John Gribble, Floyd Murray and Don Cameron.

Governor Gets Bill On Deputy Engineer

Salem — (U.P.) — The Senate Friday passed and sent to the governor House Bill 591 which would create the office of deputy state engineer.

Sen. Stewart Hardie (R-Cond.) said the need for a deputy was pointed up last year when to Oliver Kermit Smith, Portland attorney, Thursday night. Carskadon said he had been invited by Smith to attend a stag party at the Columbia-Edgewater country club but declined. He said he would have been riding home in Smith's car which was blown up in the explosion.

State Engineer Charles E. Stricklin died and his post was in virtual suspension until his successor was appointed.

Sen. Hardie stressed that the new post would not mean a new salary. The state engineer would designate one of his staff as deputy. The deputy would be acting engineer when the state engineer was absent from the state or in event of his death, until the appointment of a successor.
