Birds Important Encephalitis Link, Scientists Learn

Berkeley, Calif. — (U.P.) — A team of scientists in California has found that wild birds are an important link in the spread of encephalitis, the "sleeping sickness" that affects humans and horses.

The medical sleuths who spent six years tracking the virus in the laboratory and in the field were from the University of California, California's fish and game department, and the U. S. Public Health Service.

Scientists have known for years that humans and horses get the disease from the bite of the mosquito, Culex tarsalis. The question was: where do the mosquitoes get it?

Wild birds were under suspicion because Culex tarsalis bites them, too. To verify their suspicions the scientists scoured some 500 square miles of California's Kern County, trapping nearly 9,000 birds of 73 species and 3,000 mosquitoes of eight species.

Working directly on the transmission and encephalitis was impractical, because the feathered carriers only harbor it for a few days at a time, and the virus is extremely difficult to detect.

Instead, the disease detectives built a chain of circumstantial evidence, using an easily detected and fairly common bird disease—bird malaria.

They did this by taking blood samples from birds, and sampling the stomachs and salivary glands of mosquitoes. And they found that one species fed most readily on birds and carried bird malaria. That one was Culex tarsalis—the encephalitis carrier.

The researchers concluded that the only way to fight encephalitis is to break the link by more intensive mosquito control.

Water, Sewage Facility Increase Declared Necessity

Washington — (U.P.) — Public water and sewerage facilities must be increased by 60 per cent in the next 10 years to meet the demands of the country's growing population, according to the Associated General Contractors of America.

In the March isssue of its official magazine, the association cited preliminary results of a survey by four government agencies to confirm the need for such an increase.

The survey showed the necessity of an estimated $25,000,000,000 outlay to expand the facilities and eliminate present shortages over the next 10 years. The 1954 value of the systems was estimated at $42,000,000,000 — $23,000,000,000 for water supply and $19,000,000,000 for sewerage.

A $25,000,000,000 increase would represent a 33 per cent hike over the $9,000,000,000 in five years which President Eisenhower's Council of Economic Advisers has estimated as necessary to bring the nation's facilities up to present needs, it said.

The survey was conducted by the Commerce Department's Water and Sewerage Industry and Utilities Division, the Census Bureau, the Public Health Service and the Geological Survey. Results of the study are expected to be published soon in a service bulletin of the Commerce Department's Business and Defense Services Administration.

Of the $25,000,000,000 total, the survey recommended slightly over $10,700,000,000 for water supply needs and about $14,600,000,000 for sewerage facilities.

The study found that 1,400 water systems were inadequate today, the AGC pointed out. A 1952 survey by the Munitions Board showed nearly 1,000 systems to be deficient and a 1953 Geological Survey study put the number at 1,300.

A Nichol's Worth of . . .

Comment On This and That

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Feature Writer

Washington — (U.P.) — We really are in the squeeze-the-tube era in America now.

Harman Nichols

People have been squeezing toothpaste and glue and other goos out of tubes for years. But now comes jelly for the morning toast in such flavors as grape, strawberry, lime, lemon and orange.

The jelly I tried comes out of a fold-up metal tube. And the tube manufacturers predict that maybe some day soon you'll be able to go to your food store and ask for a tube of jelly, peanut butter or anything else that can come out of a small spout.

At home, presumably, unless there was company about, you would say "Pass the tube of strawberry jelly," or "how about a squirt of carrot juice."

Anyhow, the manufacturers of collapsible tubes—or the kind that you wind up after each squart—are aware of the fact that they are way behind the times.

Our cousins in Europe are ahead of us, even though the collapsible metal tube industry here now comprises 16 companies and 16 plants.

Last year the industry produced 959,902,704 tubes. But the collapsible tube, which came way ahead of running jelly or glue and other things, was invented and patented by an American, one John Rand. That was in 1841. And nobody around at the time thought much of it. Rand had the idea of a metal tube preserving paints "and other fluids" by confining them in closed metallic vessels so as to collapse by slight squeezing." Meaning to squeeze with the fingers.

Rand's invention also provided a device for closing the openings so that the "paint or other liquids would not be injured from the atmosphere." In other words would not clog up.

The first such tube now is on exhibit in the Smithsonion Institution.

Rand, it seems, was a pretty smart guy. More than a century ago he discovered that air was injurious to packaged products. That it would cause things to dry out and deteriorate. He hit on the idea of an ingenious method of preventing air from being drawn back into the tube with the contents.

The tube was invented in America. But America didn't pay much attention for a long time. The great mechanical minds of Europe went out to commercialize on it.

According to the modern tube makers here, who are looking back on their oversight, the real beginning of the collapsible tube industry in the U. S. was in 1870.

Tubes were made, and glue came out, and ointments and toothpaste, but nothing much else. And today we have jelly. And maybe one of these days junior will get his spinach out of a tube and a tube won't look like a can and maybe he will eat it.
