Elks Award Winners Honored at Ceremony

State Rep. Al Loucks last night told more than 50 Jackson county high school students that in the United States "the sovereignty of the individual is over and above the sovereignty of the government." He encouraged the students to participate in government.

Representative Loucks spoke at the Elks-sponsored American Youth Day program at the Elks temple, at which awards were presented to winners of leadership and scholarship contests and participants of Student Government Day were honored.

Loucks stressed the importance that each person think for himself, and pointed out that "the greatest thing in the United States is the individual." He said each person has rights which can not be taken away.

He said three things help keep the United States democratic. They are the importance of the individual, going to the church of each person's choice, and the free enterprise system. He said because the people control the government, "in America we have rights you don't find anywhere else in the world."

Loucks extended greetings from Gov. Paul Patterson, and was introduced by Past Exalted Ruler Frank Hussong.

Medford Mayor Earl Miller and Jackson County Judge Rodney Keating extended congratulations to students who participated in Student Government Day last February, and asked each student to take his responsibility and take part in government.

Elliot Becken, chairman of the Youth Activities committee, presented awards to Frank Bash and Mildred Gail, winners of the Youth Leadership contest, and Jack Thompson, a member of the committee, presented awards to scholarship contest winners. They were Michael De Vore, Verity Day, Nancy Hammers, Elaine Sorum, and Donald von Buskirk, first through fifth respectively.

Tell Appreciation

Don Robinson, Medford student mayor during Student Government Day, and Donn Johnson of Crater High school, were introduced, and expressed their appreciation to Elks club members and school officials who made Student Government Day a success.

The Boy's Glee club of St. Mary's school provided entertainment for the program. The glee club is directed by Dick Clark and David Espy is the accompanist.

Following the program an informal social with dancing and refreshments was held in the Elks party lounge.
