An Age-old Problem Solved!

Barring windstorm damage or mechanical injury, most "dead" fruit or nut trees succumb to natural conditions in the roots, or root zone. Replanting such "dead" trees, without first taking corrective measures, merely exposes the replants to the same killing conditions that finished off their predecessors. Result is that replants fail to live, or are seriously retarded in their growth to the bearing stage.

Application of KMOLA SYSTEM products to the replanting sites at least 30, and preferably 90 days before setting replants, starts the corrective measures that give replants a chance to live. Thus you initiate the protective action of better water penetration and scavenging of the soil.

At planting time, it is recommended that the young nursery stock (balled or bare-root) be submerged in the top of the roots in a half-strength Emale solution (diluted 1 to 50) for a period of 12 to 24 hours before planting. Immediately after planting, the area around the young trees should be treated with regular strength Emale solution (diluted 1 to 25 and applied at the rate of 1 qt. to 100 square feet).

Any left-over solution in which the trees were dipped, may be added to the soil for good measure, without harmful effects. In fact, KMOLA will not "burn" trees or foliage, or have any other harmful effects, even when applied at full undiluted strength.

Continue to apply regular strength Emale solution every 40 days after planting, for the first year. Thereafter, few applications a year for either deciduous or evergreen trees will prove highly profitable.

KMOLA SYSTEM products induce a more rapid development of a healthy, sturdy root system. Top growth is faster. General tone and staining of the young trees is established sooner. Trees develop the vigor and vitality necessary to produce bumper crops. It pays to rely on Emale!

[The same procedure, as outlined for replants, may be followed in establishing a new orchard of young trees—with profitable results.]

LOW IN COST

Replants, or young stock, can be treated with Emale for as little as 10¢ to 20¢ per tree for a year. Give your young trees a healthy start by sending NOW for Trial Order:
