Use of Blood-Stopping Drugs by Rocky Marciano May Cause Row

By JACK CUDDY

San Francisco—(U.P.)—A possible row over the use of blood-stopping drugs by Heavyweight Champion Rocky Marciano shaped up today when Don Cockell's manager said he would demand they be banned in Monday's title fight at Kezar Stadium.

Teddy Waltham, the general secretary of the British Boxing Board of Control, also moved into the picture on behalf of Cockell and asked a strict check on roughhouse tactics by Marciano.

John Simpson raised the issue on the use of the blood-stopping drug, called Monsell's Solution, by Marciano's handlers. Marciano, who bleeds easily and who has scar tissue over both eyes plus a damaged nose, has needed applications of drugs to stop the flow from cuts in previous fights.

Simpson asked that the California Boxing Commission make certain Marciano's handlers do not use the drug on any cuts Monday. It is banned in many states because of danger of infection. Dr. Don Lastreto, a commission physician, said it was not forbidden in California.

However, Willie Ritchie, former lightweight champion who is the commission's chief inspector for the northern district of the state, said the drug was forbidden.

Waltham, who is helping look after Cockell's interests, said he would attend a meeting of the California commission on Friday when the state's boxing rules will be clarified for both Marciano and the British Empire champion.
