Transcontinental Railroad Speeded by Civil War, Speaker Says on Observance

Promontory, Utah — (U.P.) — A Utah historian said yesterday that completion of America's first transcontinental railroad 86 years ago would have been delayed had not the Southern states seceded from the Union and started the Civil War.

Dr. Leland H. Creer, head of the University of Utah History Department, was the featured speaker at the annual reenactment of the "golden spike" ceremony.

It was 12:47 p.m., May 10, 1869, that a golden spike was driven at Promontory, north of Great Salt Lake, to join the rails of the Union and Central Pacific railroads into a transcontinental span.

Creer sketched the growing movement of a century ago of Americans who moved in increasing numbers from the Atlantic seaboard into the West.

He said there had been a "strong feeling" for years that the nation should have a transcontinental railroad, but efforts to provide federal aid were blocked by Southern states controlling the Senate.

The secession and Civil War ended these delaying tactics, the historian said, and the Union Pacific railroad bill was passed, giving the rail companies 25,000,000 acres of land for their construction efforts.

Creer described as "nonsense" allegation by other historians that the Latter-day Saints Church had opposed building of the railroads "to enhance their isolation." Instead, he insisted, the Mormons welcomed the rail-

Higher Postal Rates Predicted by Aide

Portland — (U.P.) — L. Rohe Walter, special assistant to the postmaster general, predicted here last night that postal rates would go up and that a proposed pay hike for postal employees would be vetoed by the president.

Walter said the annual post office deficit has been cut from $721,000,000 in 1952 to $399,000,000 last year and is expected to go below $350,000,000 in 1955. He explained the savings came from charging free mail to the government agencies that put it out and the fact that the department no longer subsidizes mail carrying airlines.

He said he thought Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield would recommend that president Eisenhower veto pay increases for postal workers.

roads. He read extracts from historical documents to prove his point.

Liquor By Drink Now Two Years Old

Portland — (U.P.) — Liquor by the drink in Oregon celebrates its second anniversary today.

The Oregon Liquor Control commission reports that most Oregon residents accepted liquor by the drink quite calmly, although it was absent for more than 37 years.

The OLCC said about 800 licenses to dispense cocktails have been issued in the two-year period. None has been rescinded for a violation.

Food requirements, regular inspections and stringent advertising regulations have helped to prevent abuses of the privilege.

Contrary to predictions by opponents to the step, liquor by the drink has not touched off an increase in alcoholism, nor has it increased the crime rate, according to the OLCC.

Liquor consumption figures compiled by the commission show that the most popular beverage in Oregon in spite of hard liquor dispensaries, is beer.

As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

Husband Sulks, Refuses To Speak
Some people are easily offended. They must be handled with kid gloves.

(Q) "My husband is always doing things that embarrass me or the children. For example, at a church supper not long ago, he opened two buttons on my blouse, took pickles from the relish dish and laid them on the plate of one of the ladies across the table, got up Dr. Hurlock from the table and talked to a man on the opposite side of the table. He could have visited with him after supper. I told my family about what he says and does and he feels very hurt and offended. Now he won't tell me or the children anything and he hardly speaks to us. If he can offer me, it's fine. But if I offer him it's terrible. Don't you think he is being childish? What should I do? The way he is acting at home makes it very hard on the children as well as on me."

(A) Of course it is hard to have to live in the same house with a person who goes around with a chip on his shoulder. But since he seems to want to be offended, you should do what you can to bring him out of this sullen state, even if it means eating your own words. Do this for the sake of the children.

It was not very tactful of you to complain to your family about your husband's behavior. Your husband, like many other men, likes to be the "life of the party." He wants to make other people think he is a "good fellow," and he wants to be sure that he is not overlooked. I am sure he does not embarrass you intentionally.

Why not tell him you are sorry you talked about this matter to your family? Tell him you now realize it was petty and mean of you to put him in an unfavorable light in their eyes.

Say this with such sincerity that he will believe you. Then ask him not to do things that will embarrass you in the future. Aside from this, I can see nothing further that you can do now, but try to be more tactful in the future.

FOAM AND FEATHERS

Waynesville, N. C. — (U.P.) — Chicks tired of featherbeds can now have foam rubber mattresses in hen houses. The mats aren't meant for nesting, however. They're to line egg containers as protection against breakage, reports the manufacturer, (Dayton Rubber Co.).
