Famed Cheese Spread Is Popular Party-Goer

Often at a party, guests enthuse most about a cheese spread that is served in a small Edam cheese. For large parties, the hostess is likely to have several of these on-tap . . . perhaps along with beer which increases in popularity as warmer days occur.

Advantages of this spread are many. It can be made a day or two in advance, then tucked in the refrigerator. If all is not used at one time, it can be returned to its cold shelter to await further calls. No hunting for a refrigerator dish since it is self-contained.

Cut top from Edam cheese and scoop out center with a spoon leaving thin wall to maintain the shape. Blend the scooped out cheese with sufficient room temperature beer to make a smooth mass of spreading consistency. Then add ½ teaspoon worcestershire sauce, ¼ teaspoon mustard and a good sprinkling of cayenne. Some hostesses like to add 1 teaspoon each of chopped chives and pimiento to the mixture. Replace mixture in shell and chill. Serve with or on crisp crackers or melba toast.

Ham Freeze? Specialists do not recommend the freezing of ham as freezing detracts from its characteristic fine flavor. To care for ham, cover meat to prevent drying and store in coldest part of refrigerator until ready to use. Do not slice, cut or grind ham until just before using; to do so influences flavor and texture.

Ham-Asparagus Luncheon

Ham flavor blends so well with so many things that most cooks plan for ham leftovers. Simply add two cups of cubed cooked ham to a well seasoned medium white sauce; pour over cooked asparagus spears arranged on hot toast. An excellent luncheon quickly prepared at small cost.

Lemon to Avocado

Whenever a recipe calls for both mashed avocado and lemon juice it is a good idea to add the lemon juice to the avocado as you mash it. This keeps the avocado from darkening. Be sure to select an avocado that is soft if you want it to mash easily and have excellent flavor.

Fresh Fish Fillets Fine in Many Ways

Markets offer good variety in fish fillets at small cost; not a particle of waste, all good flavorful eating. Be careful not to overcook because overcooking destroys both nutrition and flavor. Most popular ways with fillets are these:

Pan Friend. Cover fillets all over with seasoned flour. Fry in about four tablespoons cooking oil in heavy skillet until done; 8 to 10 minutes. Serve with Tartar sauce.

Baked. Dip fillets in milk seasoned with salt and then into fine bread crumbs. Place in greased baking dish, sprinkle with oil or melted butter. Brown quickly in hot oven. Serve with parsley butter.

Broiled. Season with salt, pepper, paprika and lemon juice. Brush with melted fat. Broil 5 to 8 minutes on preheated broiler. Turn carefully, brush other side and cook 5 to 8 minutes longer, or until slightly browned.

Puffed Potato Slices

Every now and then we're asked how to fix those puffed potato slices. And here's how: Select medium-size potatoes of uniform size figuring one potato per portion; pare and cut on slant in even thin slices about one-eighth inch thick. Dry between towels and fry, a few at a time in medium-hot fat (275-300 degrees) five minutes, keeping potatoes in motion. Lift basket and plunge quickly (this is the secret) into very hot deep fat (400 to 425 degrees) one to two minutes or until puffed and browned, keeping potatoes in motion.

They should puff at once when dropped into kettle of hot fat. Hold basket over kettle for fat to drip, then turn out on absorbent paper to drain. Sprinkle with salt; serve at once.

Scalloped Spinach

A delightful vegetable change, so easily accomplished. Uses two cups cooked spinch. If spinach is left over, warm and put through a sieve. Add two tablespoons minced onion, one-half teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon pepper, one slightly beaten egg and one-half cup milk. Put in greased baking dish and cover with one-half cup buttered crumbs. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, until brown. Takes about 15 minutes. Will make six servings.

World Trade Week Throws Food Spotlight on Imports-Exports

Fifty-one weeks of the year, we talk about regional, seasonal foods that are abundant in our area (and you'll find the usual list at the bottom of this column) but today we highlight foods that are important in our west coast economy because they are exported or imported.

Let us contemplate for a moment the ships carrying foodstuffs going and coming in our harbors, the vast number of persons employed in the growing and processing of these foods, the folks involved in selling, the office workers and the truckers to name a few. Our stake in imports and exports is vital to the area in which we live.

Food Imports. Among the many products and countries involved in our west coast trade, we find: Coffee from Brazil, Colombia, Central America; Tea from Ceylon, Indonesia, India. Cocoa from Brazil and Africa; Coconut from Philippines. Cacao (chocolate) from Africa, South America, Central America; Sugar from Cuba, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Philippines; Cheese from France, Italy, Switzerland and Argentina. Nuts from India, Greece, Spain, Brazil; Bananas from Costa Rica, Guatemala, Ecuador; Spices from Ceylon, India, Zanzibar, Malaya, Indonesia; Pepper from Indonesia, Africa, India; Vanilla from Madagascar, Mexico, Haiti. Pineapples from Hawaii and Philippines; Shrimp from Baja, California. And many others.

Food Exports. From our Pacific Northwest go vast wheat tonnage, goodly supplies of apples, pears, walnuts, filberts, canned salmon. From California go fresh, canned and frozen citrus fruits, dried fruits, fresh grapes, raisins, honey, sardines, mackerel, chick peas, evaporated milk, canned shellfish, refined vegetable oils . . . and baby chicks! To name a few major items.

Local Meat, Poultry. Beef and pork continue plentiful with genuine bargains in the longer cooking cuts of beef and in the bony pork cuts. Broilers and fryers are coming in to season with lower prices. Turkey continues reasonable.

Fish and Shellfish. Fresh caught Spring chinook salmon is a joy. Other steak and baking varieties include ling cod, lake whitefish, sablefish and frozen halibut. Fresh fillets include true cod, rockfish, ling cod, ocean perch and sole. Pan-readies include Eureka rex sole, sandabs, Columbia River smelts, Idaho brook trout. Plenty of shrimp.

Fruit and Vegetable supplies, about the same as last week with heavier supplies of oranges, grapefruit, avocados, lettuce, onions, carrots, cabbage, rhubarb, cauliflower, asparagus.

Around Hollywood

Aline Mosby

ABC - TV hit such a jackpot with "Davy Crockett" that the network already has another children's show lined up for fall. This one is a strictly fictional series called "Sheena, Queen of the Jungle."

The job of playing the muscular jungle girl who swings through the trees went to the darling of magazine photographers, Irish McCalla.

Irish is known to any male who ever eyed a cheesecake photo in a magazine. The tall (5'8") blonde has posed in bikinis (39-24-37) doing everything from canoeing down the Colorado river to riding a merry-go-round.

High Neckline

But as TV's new female Tarzan, Irish will climb trees, swim and wear a peopard skin with a high-cut neckline.

"We have to avoid all the pin-up stuff," Irish explained between scenes of the filmed series.

"This is for kids. If the cleavage ever gets too much in a scene, I throw my hair forward over my shoulders!"

Although men in the audience might regard her tree-swinging as a waste of cheesecake, Irish insists she is overjoyed to get out of the pin-up category.

"All my life I've been a tomboy," the Pawnee, Neb., beauty said. "Just because I'm built in a certain way people think I'm sexy. But when I was a model and the photographer would tell me to look sexy, I'd just start to laugh.

"Actually I'm athletic. I was a skin-diver when somebody asked me to pose with skin-diving equipment and that started the pin-up career."

"Sheena" appears to be a western series with tom-toms and grass huts. Irish, her real hair hanging to her waist, lives alone in the jungle for some mysterious reason.

There is, of course, a handsome hunter in pith helmet who shows up in some episodes. But the only member of the cast who gets a kiss from Irish will be her sidekick, a chimpanzee.

Irish leaves next week on a tour of New York and Washington where a build-up will start to make youngsters Sheena-conscious. In the merchandising field little girls will be able to buy Sheena shoes, jewelry and toys.

"I was the first and last person of 200 tested for the part," she said. "They almost signed Anita Ekberg—but she couldn't smile."
