Wheat surplus note:
The 1955 wheat harvest in the state of Washington is just around the corner. Storage facilities are being readied to make room for the crop.

Where is it going?

Well, Liberty ships are being towed from Suisun Bay (a part of San Francisco Bay) to Puget Sound. They will be filled with 1955 wheat and added to the fleet of 43 ships already moored in Budd's Inlet, near Olympia. These 43 ships, contain 9 1/2 million bushels of wheat, which was carried over from previous harvests.

ON THE face of it, it looks like there isn't room enough ON LAND in the state of Washington to store the surplus wheat that is being grown there.

So they have to store it on the water.

HOW IS it in the state of Oregon?
The situation here isn't quite so bad. It is true there is a mothball fleet of ships in the harbor at Astoria, and a lot of these ships are full of wheat already, and more will be added to them when the 1955 harvest comes in.

But the Commodity Credit Corporation, which buys up the surplus wheat with taxpayer money, has just arranged for an old blimp hangar at Tillamook. This will be filled with wheat as the harvest proceeds.

There is a little land left in Oregon, you see, on which surplus wheat can be stored.

THE "LIBERALS" in congress (with a weather eye on the farm vote in 1956) are hot for doing away with the sliding parity system and restoring the system of rigid, high parity for wheat and the other "basic" crops—nearly all of which are in heavy surplus condition.

What will they do when all the land available for storage of surplus crops runs out?
Do you reckon they will be willing to move out of the house and senate chambers in the Capitol building in the city of Washington so as to permit wheat to be stored there?

Here are some of the ways the

Klamath Falls To Host League of Cities Meet

Klamath Falls — (U.P.) — Klamath Falls will host a regional meeting of the League of Oregon Cities June 1. The meeting will feature a report on 1955 state legislation of interest to cities delivered by former Mayor Diamond Flynn of Medford.

association says American farm surpluses could be used abroad — by giving them away for:

1. Free school lunch programs.
2. Free industrial plant lunch programs.
3. Free food programs in hospitals and maternal and child care centers.
4. Free stamp plans for food for low-income groups.
5. Free food programs for the armed forces of other nations (maybe including Russia.)

I SUPPOSE it might work. You can give almost anything away.

But I can't help wondering how long the American taxpayer would stand for it. He has been patient and long-suffering, it is true. But there are limits beyond which even the American taxpayer might not go.

The taxpayers, it might be well for the "liberal" politicians to note, constitute a rather numerous voting group.

Jewelry Stolen From Hedy Lamarr

Houston, Tex. — (U.P.) — Hedy Lamarr reported to police that $50,000 worth of her jewelry was stolen from her home yesterday.

Miss Lamarr and her husband, Houston oilman W. Howard Lee, made the report to police. Lee said they had not reported it earlier because "we thought it must be around the house somewhere."

They said they made a thorough search of the entire house before they called police.

Miss Lamarr said she and her maid, Elizabeth Bradford, 49, took the jewelry from a dressing table about 3 p.m. yesterday and cleaned it with diamond cleaner. Then they put the jewelry back in its green leather bag and into the dressing table.

Sen. Morse Joins In Fair Procedure Bill Sponsorship

By SENATOR WAYNE MORSE

Washington — (Special) — This week I once again joined with Senator Kefauver, Senator Lehman, Senator Douglas and others in re-introducing our resolution for a code of fair committee procedures. Our bill combines the major features of the Morse-Lehman code introduced in early 1953 and other proposals to guarantee fair play to witnesses before Senate committees and those whose reputations come into question in the course of such hearings and investigations.

There was a great deal of interest in these proposals in the last Congress when Senator McCarthy's committee practices were filling the front pages. At that time I urged the adoption of the mandatory code of fair practice in committee investigations, but action was prevented by the Republican policy committee which favored an advisory system.

Cites Continuing Need

It is unfortunate that legislation such as this tends to be considered only when some emergency situation arises. Yet there is a continuing need for a code of procedure in line with the Bill of Rights of the Constitution. I shall continue to work for the enactment of this code with the co-sponsors of our resolution. It would eliminate one-man investigations, require advance notice of charges of improper activity, provide reasonable time for testimony on behalf of the accused and for reasonable cross examination of adverse witnesses.

Our code would also give the absolute right to be represented by an attorney at investigations, which is generally recognized as a basic right of a free citizen. Legislation of this type deserves consideration despite the decline of McCarthyism. The enormous power of investigating committees is subject to abuse and the possibility of abuse can and should be minimized by a code of this sort.
