Memorial Day First Observed in 1868

Carbondale, Ill. — (U.P.) — A little more than 89 years ago, three Union veterans of the Civil War saw a widow and her children place flowers on her husband's grave.

That was on April 29, 1866. They conferred with John A. "Black Jack" Logan, who had come home after resigning from the Union Army where he was a major-general commanding the Army of the Tennessee. They found he was thinking along the same lines they were — that a definite time should be set aside for honoring the war dead.

Out of Logan's ideas and the conference with the Union veterans was born, on May 30, 1868, the first proclaimed Memorial Day.

By that time, the black-haired Logan, later to become a United States Senator from Illinois, had founded the Grand Army of the Republic, an organization of Union veterans. There still remains one survivor of the GAR Albert Woolson of Duluth, Minn., now 108 years old.

Confederate Observance Logan had left his hometown here and gone to Washington in 1868. His wife took a Southern tour, and told him of observance honoring the Confederate war dead at Richmond. He also remembered the incident back home in Carbondale, where he had spoken at ceremonies honoring the war dead.

He asked the GAR to sponsor memorial services across the nation for the Union dead, and picked May 30 as the day to "take full advantage of the blooming season of most flowers." And he issued General Order No. 11 which read in part: "The 30th day of May, 1868, is designated for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of the men who died in defense of their country . . . and whose bodies lie in every city, village and hamlet churchyard in the land . . ."

Becomes National Holiday Before Logan died in 1868, his Decoration day was a national holiday and now Memorial Day is observed in 42 states on May 30 and six other states have

Nagging Leads To Slaying of Three

Phoenix — (U.P.) — A bitter 28-year-old father was in critical condition and under police guard today after killing two of his three children and his wife because "all I hear is nag, nag, nag."

Lester E. Bartholomew, police said, apparently turned his 22 caliber rifle on himself after the slayings and critically wounded himself.

Dead were his wife, Marie, 23, their daughter, Pamela, 2, and a son, Rickie, 3. A third child, Linda, 5, fled from the family's motel apartment without being injured.

Police said Bartholomew told them he had planned to kill the three children but not his wife, because he wanted to "leave her to suffer."

A note was found signed "Mr. Bartholomew" in the apartment which read: "I don't want my children to go through with what I have . . . all I hear is nag, nag, nag, and when I am trying to do right it is all the worse. Marie, I hope you enjoy life."
