England Speculates About Plans of Princess Margaret

By ROBERT MUSEL
United Press Correspondent

London—(U.P.)—There's a great day coming for Princess Margaret—if she wants it. It is August 21, her 25th birthday, the day when she no longer has to ask Queen Elizabeth whom she can wed.

On that day of freedom the little princess can, if she wishes, announce her intention of getting married. She has to wait 12 months before the ceremony, but once she has made her choice only an act of Parliament can stop her.

The first drops of what will certainly become a cloudburst of speculation are already pattering against the rambling townhouse of the Windsors. Will she make such an announcement? And if she does, will it be Group Capt. Peter Townsend?

These are the questions being parried already by Commander Richard Colville, press secretary to the queen.

He expects a very rough summer.

New Demands
As an indication of what is in store for him, the Sunday Express this week demanded that the royal family confirm or deny that Margaret wants to marry Townsend, who was "exiled" to the post of air attaché in Brussels two years ago this month.

Meanwhile, society circles heard that Michael Bonham-Carter, 33-year-old publisher and

"old faithful" among Margaret's escorts, planned to marry Lady St. Just, daughter of the late American magazine publisher, Conde Nast. Bonham-Carter was a leading dark horse in the Margaret matrimonial stakes and his departure cuts the field of eligibles down to a paltry three.

Only one of this remaining trio is given even the ghost of a chance—Billy Wallace, wealthy polo-playing stepson of American writer Herbert Agar. He sees a lot of the princess but his best friends claim it is friendship, not love. The other two, Lord Porchester and Colin Tennant, say they are not ready for marriage.

Possible Spinster
Is the princess to wind up a spinster, then? Some knowledgeable courtiers think this is quite possible. Others wonder whether she is letting her chances slip because she is waiting for August 21—and Group Captain Townsend.

Nowhere will the approach of the vital day be watched with more anxiety than in Buckingham Palace itself. The royal family believes—and this is from an excellent source—that Princess Margaret has recovered from her infatuation for the handsome war hero.

They feel she realizes the handicaps—he is divorced, has two growing boys, makes only $6000 a year, is too old for her. In addition, because of his divorce he can never have the approval of

Scout Day Camp To Open Monday

Buses will provide transportation from town to the camp on the banks of Bear creek, and will leave from the four elementary city schools, Lincoln, Jackson, Washington and Roosevelt. Girls are to be at the various schools promptly at 9:30 a.m.

To Install

Shady Cove—Shady Cove post and auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will hold joint installation of officers Sunday, June 5. The ceremonies are set for 2 p.m. at VFW hall in Shady Cove.

It is stated that the meeting is open and anyone wishing to attend will be welcome.

Queen Elizabeth, who is head of the established church.

Then why the anxiety? Margaret keeps her own counsel. Her family aren't quite sure what lies behind those startlingly blue eyes. Is she thinking of August 21 as just another birthday or a day of decision?
