The public is invited to attend Thursday's meeting.

Newest cotton fashion of them all—the summer shirtdress with confectionary touches. Left: Jane Derby designs a garden-party sheer coat dress with a ruffled closing in floral printed organdy. Right: A cool and collected voile shirtdress by Herbert Sondheim has a tucked bodice and radiating tucks at the neckline.

A light-hearted design by Minx Modes features the barber pole look. This cotton coat dress has its own "barber pole" striped separate petticoat, tiny striped matching gloves, and striped bow tie. The cotton dress can be worn open with stripes peeking through or completely buttoned.

New summer romance—a ruffled dance dress in pastel cotton by Roppi. A tiny waist is accented by a cummerbund—the bouffant skirt flares out prettily.

Living Foods Group Plans Picnic Tuesday

The final meeting for the season for members of the Living Foods Study group and their friends will be a picnic supper Tuesday, June 7, at the Irving S. Thomas home on Pioneer road, the former Miles Gammill residence. The supper will be served at 5:30 p.m., and members should take table service and a potluck dish for the meal.

Wedding Ring Styles Change; Tradition Gone

New York — The bride's wedding ring has gone through style changes as "drastic and daring" as have women's clothes since the turn of the century, a survey of jewelers here discloses.

Nuptial ring "best sellers" today, they say, are as different in design from grandmother's heavy gold hoop as the hour-glass silhouette is from the modern sheath line. What's more, the new look in marital rings required a good deal more daring to achieve, jewelers feel.

Tradition and sentiment have always played a dominant role in matters affecting wedding rings. Usually the same band was handed down from mother to daughter, who never dared restyle it, much as she may have wished. The style was generally the same—a completely plain circle of metal.

But fashion has replaced tradition for the 1955 bride-to-be, the survey shows. Rarely does she plight her troth wearing the family ring, and even less frequently does she select a prim style. The white precious metals platinum and palladium are increasingly preferred. Also, wide rings are in great demand because width allows for design interest in the form of carved motifs or filigree treatment.

Another break with the past is that brides are glamorizing their rings with diamonds or colored stones. When the budget doesn't allow it, however, designers often carve diamond-like designs in brilliant white palladium that give the appearance of real gems.

The old-fashioned gold ring of 50 years ago has not passed out of the picture, but the emphasis is definitely on gems, design interest and the fashionably-white precious metals.

Dennis Day Gets Lift From Cops

Portland — (U.P.) — Tenor Dennis Day arrived in Portland in a police prowl car and in the company of a police prisoner Friday.

Day, who will take part in the stadium shows during Portland's Rose Festival next week, arrived in the City of Roses a day earlier than planned after a flying trip from Houston, Tex.

There was no reception committee at Portland International Airport to greet the singer but two police officers on hand to pick up a prisoner from San Jose, Calif., recognized Day and offered him a ride to his hotel.

Day accepted and said he was glad to save the $1.25 cab fare.

Claire McCordell designs something brand new in sports togs. Her gay two-piece in plaid cotton is assured of eye and silhouette appeal through bold outline use of the plaid.
